INSULL ACQUITTED AMID CHEE

All This May Mean War
Why Must We Lean?
Notre Dame Won
Old Age Knows Why

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1934, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., international copyright and all rights reserved.)

THERE IS war talk with a meaning in Europe. Hungary is filled with rage because Yugoslavia accuses Hungarians of plotting the murder of King Alexander. The Hungarians are fighters, but no murderers.

England and France are agitated by alleged news that Germany is arming with all possible speed, regardless of the Versailles treaty.

There are a dozen causes for war floating around Europe, and no particular cause for peace, except that no nation could well afford another war—Uncle Sam's pockets being tightly buttoned, at present.

Japan wants it understood she will build as many warships as she chooses and will repudiate the Washington conference at which this country, guided by the hand of England, like a little baby, learning to walk, agreed to a certain ratio of warship construction.

Japan, as an independent nation, has a right to do as she chooses, subject, as all nations are, to consequences.

The amusing part is that the United States, according to British information, will "now seek an informal accord with Great Britain" on shipbuilding and other things.

Why must Uncle Sam always lean against somebody or something? Can't he stand on his own feet? Can't he tell England and the rest of the world: "This is what I am going to do," and do it, instead of everlastingly asking:

"What do you think I ought to do?"

Stanley Baldwin, for England, says the United States must be part of any effort to insure the peace of the world, adding: "Never will I sanction the British navy being used for the armed blockade of any power until I know what the United States is going to do."

That is much appreciated, but Americans hope the United States, if war comes again, will know enough to mind its own business, keep its men and its money at home. It has had one lesson.

Notre Dame won and a forceful young giant is their captain. Is he Irish, German, Scandinavian, North American? His name is Dominic Vairo, descendant of those that built Rome and conquered the world. Much power persists in that old Roman strain, even though it be Latin not "Nordic."

In Brooklyn, N. Y., Miss Louisa Herle died aged 79, having lived a long time in the basement of her house, most economically. After her death more than half a million dollars in cash, bank accounts and bonds were found, hidden in the house, with old metal, broken furniture, odds and ends innumerable. The world wonders what comfort the old spinster could have taken in that fortune, living under outward conditions of misery.

The old will know what comfort she took. SHE KNEW THAT SHE WAS INDEPENDENT. She had no need to think of poor house or Potter's Field. She wanted nothing, but she knew that if she did want it she could have it.

Every day the old lady could say to herself: "I have the money hidden and I can do as I choose at any moment." That is a satisfaction in old age.

This will interest business men and newspaper publishers. Mr. James C. Dayton, former publisher of the New York Evening Journal, and one of the ablest, most highly respected newspaper publishers in the United States, thought he wanted to retire, but wisely changed his mind. As business advisor and business ruler, he is associated with this writer in the direction of the New York Mirror. It is not necessary to tell those who know Mr. Dayton that what he advises is done.

Isaac Mosley, a Negro, convicted of murder, was executed yesterday in the electric chair at Columbus, Ohio. His last request having been granted, he entered the death chamber dressed in a long white robe. He had begged permission to die "wearing a robe like Christ." Reporters who saw him die say he seemed very proud of the long, spotless gown, fastened around the waist with a black cord, as, with a dignified gait, he walked to the chair. He evidently planned an impressive, solemn exit but, observing the crowd, he grinned.

Where do you suppose he went. Could so simple a mind be held fully responsible for its acts?

Two persons were found dead in a queer way on one of the small Galapagos Islands. Both died of starvation and thirst. They had baby clothes with them but no baby. Ecuador, owner of the Galapagos, will investigate the strange deaths.

Unusual deaths interest the living. The man who jumped into the mouth of a volcano, an-

ROSCOE, ELI STAR, PASSES HIS ELEVEN TO VICTORY

27-Yard Toss to Morton Results in the Opening Touchdown of a Torrid Game

Roscoe Then Makes Short Pass to Kelley for Second Touchdown for Yale.

Complete stories of yesterday's major football games will be found in the Sports Section.

By AUSTEN LAKE

Yale Bowl, New Haven, Conn., Nov. 24—Yale fulfilled pre-game prophesies in her big concrete, soup tureen this afternoon by beating Harvard, 14 to 0, in a game that found the Crimson staging two belated drives that fell short of touchdowns by the length of a walking cane.

Harvard did everything but score, coming out of the game with 14 first downs to Yale's 10. But early power, plus Captain Clare Curtin's luck in starting with the wind at his back, turned the bat trick and thus Yale's power and deception steamrolled Harvard in the firs two quarters with Strat Morton taking a finely conceived shovel pass behind his line and hula-hipping through the entire Harvard team for 20 odd yards and a touchdown just as the initial period ended.

LUCKY SCORE

But the second Yale score, my friends, was one that might just as well have been a goose-egg, a blank and a large gob of vacancy. For it came in the second quarter on fourth down, with Harvard knowing all about it before hand, yet was caught flat footed when the famed Roscoe to Kelley pass, a wobbly, wild shot fell safe in his hands, like a Thanksgiving turkey in a pauper's basket.

It was the sort of game that Harvard players, coaches and followers might review through the winter and find dozens of ways of whistling out an imaginary victory.

If Harvard tacklers had had a little more glue on their hands to stick to Morton's coattails. If Harvard pass defenders had rubbed the sandman's sleep out of their eyes when Kelley was galloping free, wide and handome. If the Harvard offense in the third quarter had not caugh to jitters on Yale's two-yard line, and again if Ford hadn't missed the snap back from center in the final quarter, then, my friends, Harvard might have won a rousing victory.

POINT WITH PRIDE

But alas, none of these things happened, and the game went to a hustling Yale team, which perhaps made its own breaks and was promptly on top of Harvard's blunders.

Yet there is much for Harvard

Millerand Warns Saar War Looms

Paris Premier Urges Control of Coal Area With Britain

By ALEXANDRE MILLERAND
Former President of France
By Special Wireless

Paris, Nov. 24—The Treaty of Versailles regulated the question of the Saar in its Articles 45 to 50.

It would be surprising if that settlement were not disputable. At least, have we not the right to say that the solution was adopted carelessly?

Alexandre Millerand

Its discussion constituted one of the most dramatic catastrophies of the post-war debates among the allies. An open break almost resulted. In vain Marshal Foch maintained with impassioned foresight that the Rhine should have remained the barrier indispensable to the safety of the people of western Europe and of civilization. He struck against a stone wall of incomprehension and preconceived ideas.

The French government encountered similar resistance when it contented itself with demanding that territories which had been united to France during two centuries be returned; territories which the Treaty of Paris, May 30, 1814, had conserved for

ARMS POLICY HIT BY SENATOR

New York, Nov. 24 (INS)—Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of the Senate special committee investigating munitions, today scored the United States government as a "partner" in the "damnable game" munitions manufacturers are "playing on civilization."

Speaking before the Foreign Policy Association on Munitions Control, he said:

"We lend our ships to go all over the world and demonstrate new machines. We developed a new air-cooled motor for planes and an American manufacturer, selling them to Germany and Japan and other nations, has enjoyed a profit, since 1925, of 1,143,000—not dollars—but per cent of his original investment.

"They sell patents, secrets and designs to nations that may come to be our foes, and we're told we must countenance it—countenance arming all the world so we can have capacity to arm ourselves when and if those nations decide to use those arms against us—countenance it to maintain the industry!"

Gas Blast Fatal to Mother of 6

No. Reading, Nov. 24—Mrs. Frank Burt, 40, wife of a foreman at the Andover CCC camp and mother of six children, died in Lawrence General hospital today of burns suffered yesterday when a barrel of gasoline exploded in the back yard of her home.

Mrs. Burt received her fatal burns while trying to roll the barrel of gasoline out of the range of a rubbish fire in the yard, when it exploded. Her 19-year-old daughter, Doris, suffered severe burns trying to save her mother.

5 BELIEVED MURDERED IN TROPIC EDEN

Letter by English Writer to U. S. Reveals Love Feuds on Island Ruled by Baroness

(Copyright, 1934, by Detroit Times and Universal Service. All rights reserved.)

Detroit, Nov. 24—Five persons, one an Austrian baroness, were believed dead in the Gallapagos Island nudist colony today, and two of them were men whose bodies, found washed ashore on lonely Marchena Island, informed the world of the tragedy of the South Seas "Isle of Love."

A letter received here today from Fred W. Raysbrook, of Philadelphia, Pa., an engineer formerly employed by Great Britain who later became an expoirer and writer, revealed for the first time the sensational tale of equatorial love and gave an open hint that two persons may have been slain in a lovers' quarrel that eventually also claimed a murder suspect and two innocent men as victims.

Raysbrook's letter identified the two bodies found on Marchena island as those of Alfred Rudolph Lorenz, a German from Paris, and a Norwegian fisherman, Trygve Nuggerud. Believed lost with them was a young Ecuadorean sailor, whose body is thought to have been washed out to sea when their smal craft overturned in a storm.

The Austrian Baroness Bosquet de Wagner Wehrborn and Robert Phillipson, a German who is believed to have shared her love with Lorenz until the love idyll resulted in ill-feeling, were thought to have been slain on Charles Island because of conflicting accounts given by other islanders and Lorenz before he lost his life.

KNOWN AS "ISLE OF LOVE"

This startling denouement of a tragedy which has astounded the world was given in Raysbrook's letter explaining the peculiar situation on Charles Island, known to its three nudist groups as "The Isle of Love." Although the letter was written before the bodies were discovered, their finding confirmed many of Raysbrook's suspicions and the gossip among the nudists.

The letter was sent to Guayaquil, Ecuador, 600 miles from the island, by one of the infrequent mail boats touching Charles Island, and then was airmailed from Guayaquil on Nov. 14, four days before the bodies

Los Angeles Tied Up by Car Strike

Los Angeles, Nov. 24 (INS)—Thousands of Los Angeles car riders were literally left standing on the curb when Los Angeles street car and motor coach men of the Los Angeles Railway Corp. walked out early today, the strike becoming effective shortly after 6 o'clock.

The walkout came without warning to most of the city's 1,400,000 residents and after a period of puzzled waiting, clerks, stenographers and laborers frantically began to "thumb" rides from passing motorists or started walking the weary miles to their jobs.

Yale Group Finds Ancient Temple

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 24 (US-INS) — Yale University and the French academy which are jointly excavating Dura, "the Pompeii of the Euphrates" have uncovered a temple dedicated to the great Persian god, Mithras, the most important god of the Roman army, it was reported today.

The temple was found excellently preserved, he reported. It was decorated with two bas-reliefs depicting great exploits of Mithras.

ZOO LOSES POISON BEAST

Washington, Nov. 24 (AP)—The Washington zoo lost its most deadly load of poison today. Its bushmaster starved itself to death.

ROOSEVELT FOR HOUSING BY CAPITAL

Ickes' 2000 Million Program Scrapped by Truce Seen as Victory for Private Industry

Washington, Nov. 24 (US-INS)—President Roosevelt today quickly stopped the bitter internal warfare which had threatened his gigantic home building program with disaster.

The immediate result was a joint statement signed by Housing Administrator Moffett and Interior Secretary Ickes declaring they are now agreed government funds should not be used for construction where private capital is available.

This action was regarded as a signal victory for Moffett and the private banking and industrial interests which he had stoutly defended.

It is regarded as a definite administration step to reassure private capital by scrapping the Ickes program, which contemplated 2000 million dollar nation-wide home building, financed by the government, the low price houses to be sold to individuals with no down payment and interest of only three per cent.

SIGN JOINT TRUCE

The joint "truce" was signed at the White House after Ickes and Moffett had met with Secretary Early representing the President, and had composed their differences. The statement said:

"It seems a pity that either misinterpretation, or a desire to stir up trouble where no trouble exists, should have given rise to stories which create the impression that there is a divergence of views between the housing administration and the public works administration.

"No conflict or overlapping exists. The housing administration seeks to encourage through insurance the improving of existing homes. The people throughout the country woh will be helped by the housing administration are primarily those who still have some borrowing power and some security to offer.

DIFFERENT FUNCTIONS

"On the other hand, the public works administration, through its housing program, provides government money for home building primarily to those people throughout the country who have no borrowing power and are so situated that in practically every case they could not fall into the category of those who are being helped by the housing administration.

"The two administrations perform wholly different functions, affect the lives of wholly different groups of people and each administration is proceeding to carry out its own assignment without conflict with the other.

"We met today at the suggestion of each of us. It was the first occasion we had to sit down together and discuss the jurisdictions of our respective administrations. We found that we were in substantial accord on what we considered to be the policy of the administration, both as to public works and as to the housing administration.

"We suspect that there is a difference of opinion between us. We decline to furnish the material for a Roman holiday for those who are trying to create this impression."

The housing row ended unexpectedly as "Right-Wingers," representing bankers, industrial leaders and labor, supporting Moffett,

Seven in Havana Injured by Bombs

Havana, Nov. 24 (AP)—Eight bombs exploded in downtown Havana late today, wounding seven persons.

The explosion of the bombs terrified the theater and shopping crowds. The hour chosen for the attacks was the same picked before when explosions in big department stores cost a total of a half dozen lives and injuries to more than a score, mostly women.

Jury Frees Insull And 16 in Two Hours

Verdict Is Hailed by Cheers

Samuel Insull

Chicago, Nov. 24 (AP)—Samuel Insull and all his co-defendants were acquitted of mail fraud charges today by a Federal court jury which had deliberated a little more than two hours.

A demonstration broke out in the courtroom as a poll of the jury affirmed the verdict.

Members of the jury stated that after the first two weeks of the long trial they were convinced of the innocence of the accused.

Insull, whose 75th birthday came in the midst of the eight week trial, issued a brief statement after the verdict.

"I look upon this as the start of my vindication," he declared.

ROOM RINGS TO CHEERS

The following colloquy, preceded the announcement of the decision crashing down to defeat the government's attempt to convict the Insull group of a mail fraud amounting to $100,000,000.

Judge Wilkerson asked:

"Have you reached a verdict?"

"We have," said Lent.

"Read it," the judge commanded.

"We find the defendants not guilty."

The courtroom rang with cheers.

The jury had received the case after about two hours of instructions from the judge at 2:21 p. m. The jurymen and courtroom spectators waited until 4:51 p. m. before the verdict could be announced while the judge, attorneys and 17 defendants were rounded up.

ON TRIAL 8 WEEKS

But the speed with which the jury arrived at a verdict had been taken by court attaches and by

NEW HUNT FOR SPEER WEAPON

Northfield, Nov. 24—Thirty state troopers were ordered to report here at 8 o'clock tomorrow morning to search an era near the Mt. Hermon School campus, along a back road between Gill and Bernardston, for the shotgun used in the murder of Dr. Elliott Speer, the school headmaster.

The order was issued tonight by Col. Paul C. Kirk, commissioner of public safety, and Capt. John F. Stokes of the state police at the end of a day of secret activity in the mystery now three months old.

Col. Kirk and Capt. Stokes conferred with Albert Roberts, executive secretary of the school board of trustees, and Thomas Watson, the disciplinarian.

They also awaited opportunity to talk with James Bodley, the school laundry superintendent and Mrs. Bodley, and William Nerig, school carpenter, and Mrs. Nerig. They were standing a short distance from the school library on the night of the murder when a car, never identified or eliminated in the case, passed them at about the time of the crime.

Old Quincy Man Dying From Crash

Harry Butterfield, 73, one of the oldest residents of Quincy, is dying in Quincy City hospital following an automobile accident in Walnut street last night.

Butterfield was struck, according to the police, by an automobile operated by Arthur Hager, of Fairfield street, Quincy, while he was on the way to the Quincy Public Library. He sustained a compound fracture of the skull.

STRIKE TO PUT 6 CITIES IN DARK

Providence, R. I., Nov. 24—Serious danger that several of the largest industrial cities of Massachusetts and Rhode Island would be without light or power next week threatened today when workers of the Narragansett Electric Light company announced they would walk out next Tuesday.

Unless the strike is prevented, workers of the Montaup Power Company of Somerset, Mass., one of the principal "feeding" stations for other local power companies, will also walk out, according to their union representatives.

Vernon D. Chamberlain, national vice-president of the Brotherhood of Utility Employes, informed James E. Tohr, representative of the Narragansett company workers today, that the Montaup workers were ready to join them in a sympathy strike.

Chamberlain said the strike at the two plants would seriously affect Brockton, Taunton, Fall River, New Bedford and Worcester, in Massachusetts, and Pawtucket, R. I.

In an effort to prevent the threatened tieup of industry Chamberlain said, the New England Power company is seeking to recruit workers from Lowell, Haverhill and Lawrence.

Relief Food Is Found Poisoned

Toledo, O., Nov. 24 (AP) — Six cans of meat selected at random from 2000 cases sent here by the federal government for relief distribution were found dangerously contaminated, Dr. Basil B. Brim, Toledo health commissioner, reported today.

SEARCH SLAYERS TINY GIRL IN N. E. AUT

Blonde Beauty Views Bodie at Morgue; Believes Victim Children of Her Sister

"Babes in Woods" Mystery Baffles Police; All Garbed in Silk But Identity Hidden

Carlisle, Pa., Nov. 24 (AP)—Three girls found dead today on a lonely mountainside near Huntsdale may have died from carbon monoxide poisoning, physicians said tonight at the conclusion of their autopsies.

Pennsylvania State Police investigating the deaths, turned their attention to a search for an automobile bearing a Connecticut license seen in the vicinity yesterday morning.

Harry L. McElroy, chief of detectives of the state police, asked Connecticut authorities to check two license numbers.

Edward Spar, Carlisle policeman, reported seeing the car in which he said were "three rough suspicious looking men."

HUNT WOMAN'S SISTER

Sparr said the machine was moving slowly near the pine grove Furnace road where the bodies were found.

An attractive blond, about 25 years old, twice viewed the bodies in a Carlisle mortuary tonight. At first she was accompanied by a young man, like herself well dressed.

A few minutes later, obviously close to tears, she was led again into the death room.

Her identity, and that of her escort, were withheld for the time being.

Dr. E. A. Haegele, county coroner, said the blonde told him she "thinks" the oldest girl may be her sister's child.

Officers immediately went out in company with the woman to locate her sister.

Police declined to disclose the identities of the women.

A short time earlier, police announced an unnamed mountain farmer told them he was bringing in his sister-in-law, who is estrangled from her husband, to view the bodies. He told police the couple have three children whose discription fits the girls in the tragedy.

KILLED SOMEWHERE ELSE

McElroy said the only theory he has at present is that the children "might have been killed by monoxide fumes and brought to the spot where they were found."

The autopsies, completed this evening, show no signs of internal or external violence, physicians said. Authorities were considering the possibility that carbon monoxide might have caused the deaths.

An official statement by Coroner A. E. Haegele said:

"The autopsies on chest and abdomen showed everything normal.

"The case depends on an analysis of the stomachs and blood and on the confession of the person or persons who committed the crime."

W. Bairr Stuart, autopsy physician, said:

"No external or internal marks of violence were found. There has been some discussion of carbon monoxide poisoning."

Asked why he considered the poison theory, he said: "Lack of other evidence."

Haegele said one of the girls, about 10 or 11 years old, was "criminally attacked before death." Dr. Stuart said she had been attacked, but he did not know if it was a criminal case. The other two showed no signs of assault.

The other girls were between seven and eight and 15 and 16 years old.

Dr. Stuart said: "I would judge they had been dead from 24 to 48 hours."

FAIRYLAND FOR HER

Hartford, Ct., Nov. 21 (AP)—Herbert C. Parsons, 81, veteran New England theatrical man, died today at his home. For 25 years he owned and managed the Parsons theater here, opening the playhouse in 1896 with Dewolf and Edna Wallace Hopper in "Doctor Syntax."

ROYAL POMP

BRIDE OF KENT

London, Nov. 24 (INS)—In the romantic eyes of London's millions, this grim, foreboding, time-worn city during the last few days has been transformed into a magic fairyland.

It has required little imagination to pierce through the murky November fogs to reveal the royal homage which reaches its climax Thursday when the handsome young prince, the Duke of Kent, marries his beautiful, stately Grecian Princess Marina in Westminster Abbey amid scenes of pomp, pageantry, splendor and gallantry the like of which no city in the wide world could equal.

Thursday's ceremony has all the elements of a fairy story.

Up the main aisle and towards the high altar in the ancient abbey, the poor, exiled Prince Nicolas of Greece will lead his undowered and exiled Princess daughter, and she wil be led down the aisle again leaning on the arm of her handsome sailor husband, transformed into the Fourth Lady in the world's greatest and most powerful empire.

A Royal Duchess and a happy bride, Marina will be driven away in a gold coach drawn by six milk-white ponies through streets lined with cheering multitudes.

This metamorphosis ought to be achieved by the magic flick of a fairy queen's wand. Instead, it will take two archbishops and a half a dozen other high clerics to legalize the happy nuptials, and it will be watched by a crowded congregation, half of which will be kings and princes of the blood, members of the highest aristocracy, statesmen and diplomats, all brilliantly uniformed, bemedalled and bejewelled.

The brightest jewel of the whole setting, however, will be the charming young bride. Her choice of a dress in simple style will be in sharp contrast to the pomp and ceremony.

The wedding dress and trousseau were chosen by Marina at the famed fashion house of Captain Molyneux of Paris. The dress is in Lyons silver brocade, into which is woven an English rose.

HANFY

AT CONANT

Berlin, Nov. 24 (INS)—Dr. Ernst Hanfstaengl, personal aide to Reichsleader Adolf Hitler and a Harvard graduate, today renewed his feud with Doctor James B. Conant, President of Harvard University.

ERNST HANFSTAENGL

Taking the occasion of Harvard's refusal of a $1500 travelling scholarship in Germany, offered by Dr. Matthew T. Mellon, to air his views, Hanfstaengl declared:

"The persistency of Dr. Conant and Green (Jerome D. Green, secretary of the Harvard Corporation) in refusing scholarships in German universities is extremely difficult to understand unless there are reasons which they have not avowed.

"I don't know Mellon personally, but I presume his offer was partly due to Dr. Conant's refusal of mine."

Hanfstaengl wired the "Crimson," Harvard under-graduate publication offering the hospitality of Munich to the members of the 1934 Harvard football team, "regardless of race, color, or previous condition of servitude," he added jocularly.

TICKET

Puts Plane

DOWN IN N. Y.

New York, Nov. 24—A passenger air liner went out of its way to land Mayor LaGuardia at Floyd Bennett Field tonight—all because the mayor insisted on literal interpretation of his "Chicago to New York" ticket.

The mayor boarded the plane after the close of the U. S. conference of mayors in Chicago.

It arrived at Newark, its regular terminal, at 6:55 p. m. and dropped off mail bags and all other passengers except the mayor.

La Guardia reminded executives of how his ticket read and commented that Mrs. La Guardia, his secretary, Lester Stone, and others were awaiting him at Floyd Bennett.

Officials, who recently announced they would move to Floyd Bennett Field, acquiesced. The trip from Newark to Floyd Bennett was made in 14 minutes.

Speed Clock

TIMES AUTOIST AT 100 AN HOUR

Motorists on the Boston-Providence road have been electrically timed at speeds as great as 100 miles an hour, the Highway Traffic Research Bureau disclosed yesterday.

As proof of habitual speeding by motorists on this road, the bureau's survey, sponsored by the State Department of Public Safety, showed that 62.5 per cent of a recent clocking of 1000 cars showed speeds between 45 and 60 miles an hour.

So exact is the timing device that only sixteen feet, between two wires laid across the road, is needed to compute a car's speed, or approximately 1-5 of a second for a machine going 60 miles an hour.

The bureau is timing cars at present on Route 1, north and south of Boston. Its apparatus was designed by two unemployed engineers at the M. I. T. laboratories who were placed on the ERA payroll for the purpose.

Plett Quits

GIVES UP SAFETY POST

Henry A. Plett, chief administrative clerk of the Department of Public Safety, and a figure in the state police investigation which resulted in resignations of Commissioner Foote and Captain Charles T. Beaupre two years ago, has resigned.

Lieutenant-Colonel Paul Kirk, new head of the department, said Plett's resignation had been in his hands since early this month. No reason for the action was given.

During the Foote regime Plett figured in several incidents which later became the subject of official investigation. He was scheduled for removal when General Needham took command of the department. Plett retained as counsel former District-Attorney Robert T. Bushnell and indicated that he would fight to the finish any move to oust him.

May Not Give It Away

Million Due From Rich Mother

New York, Nov. 24—Another million dollars, all his own to give away, is due to be inherited by Alexander E. O. Munsell, the visionary humanitarian who tossed off his first million and is now "broke" in a Broadway flop house.

When the next million arrives, Munsell remarked today, he will not know what to do with it.

"I don't think I'll keep it," he said. "I haven't decided how to dispose of it. Of course, I'd have no use for it other than to carry out my beliefs."

But millionaire or pauper, his two sons, who attend school in Tucson, Ariz., will remain devoted to their father, they said today.

"He's a great scout," they declared. "We are sorry to hear he hasn't any money. That's tough. He knows, though, that we still love him even if he doesn't have a sou."

The two boys are Davis, 12, and Stephen, 10. An older son, Alexander, Jr., is at the Middlesex School in Concord, preparing for Harvard.

Munsell is due to inherit the estate of his aged mother, Mrs. Juliet Munsell, now living in California. The mother was bequeathed the bulk of her husband's $10,000,000 fortune.

CCC Gets TURKEY

Washington, Nov. 24 (Ap)—Not only are the 350,000 CCC boys going to have honest-to-goodness turkey for Thanksgiving but one out of three stands a good chance of drawing a drumstick.

Director Robert Fechner, mindful of appetites born of axe swinging in forests, slipped the news to the conservation workers today that about 55,000 birds—660,000 pounds or 330 tons—would be served with all the trimmings.

IT'S THE HIGGINSONS-- WEDDING WAS QUIET

MR. AND MRS. HENRY LEE HIGGINSON—They were married yesterday. She is the former Dorothy Hedden Fulton. He, of course, is the grandson of the noted banker and symphony orchestra founder. (Exclusive picture by Lawrence C. McDavitt, Boston Sunday Advertiser Staff Photographer.)

A Dozen See Them Wed

OFF ON SECRET HONEYMOON

After a swift dash over the road from Cambridge to East Providence, accompanied by only six friends and relatives, Henry Lee Higginson young Boston clubman and grandson of the famous banker and founder of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, was quietly married yesterday to Mrs. Dorothy Hedden Fulton, 30, of Grozier rd., Cambridge.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. Leroy Wood, in the parish house of the Congregational Church of Providence. Witnesses were Robert Lee Gill, Jr., and Paul Van Castle Hedden, Jr., a brother of the bride. Four other guests were present: including the bride's mother, Mrs. Jesse Lyman Hatten of Cambridge, and a 9-year-old daughter, Blanche Fulton.

A week ago, Higginson filed marriage intentions at the town hall in East Providence. Last Friday, he obtained the license from the town clerk.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the Hotel Biltmore. The couple then speeded away in the general direction of New York, declining to reveal their honeymoon destination.

"We're on our way to a secret hideaway, but it isn't fair to ask us just where we're going," the bride said. She wore, for the ceremony, a smart green fur-trimmed ensemble, with a corsage or orchids.

Higginson was recently divorced in Middlesex probate court by his first wife, the former Betty Bird, Back Bay socialite, known as the "Amethyst Bride."

At the time of her marriage, she received from the Higginson estate a magnificent amethyst studded cross which by family tradition has been a gift to brides for generations.

Mrs. Fulton, a divorcee, is the daughter of Mrs. Jesse Lyman Fulton of Cambridge. She is a graduate of Ohio State University.

HUNGER STRIKER DEFIES WARNING

Bridgeton, N. J., Nov. 24 (INS)—While his wife pleaded for gubernatorial pardon William H. O'Donnell, "hunger striker" in the jail here today ignored the warning that "he would die very soon unless he eats at once."

After 11 days of self-imposed starvation, O'Donnell's liver and kidneys have shrunk. Dr. H. G. Miller, Cumberland County physician, told him:

"If you eat today it will take six months to get you back where you were when you started."

O'Donnell, former state trooper and farm labor organizer, was convicted of disorderly conduct in connection with the disturbances during the Seabrook Farm strike near Vineland, N. J., last summer. His appeal was denied and he began serving six months in jail on November 14.

3-Way Fight

Election In Beverly

For the first time in Beverly's municipal history, names of three mayoralty candidates instead of the customary two will appear on the ballot election day, Dec. 11.

A recount of the primary vote in which Mayor Paul F. Eaton was nosed out of second place by five votes, yesterday placed him in a tie with Alderman Daniel E. MacLean. MacLean lost four votes while Eaton gained one, giving each 1,875 votes.

Former mayor James Torrey topped the primaries with a plurality of 300.

FOR GAY ROMANS

Rome, Nov. 24 (US-INS)—(Special Cable)—Capitalizing on the notoriety he won in the United States, Charles Ponzi, the Italian born swindler who was deported from Boston after serving a prison sentence, plans an attempt to revive Rome's night life. Ponzi today told Universal Service:

"I am going to open a real hot night club—American style.

"Everybody in America knows me and when they come to Rome they will visit the club, if only to see me.

"When the club gets going good I will bring over my wife, who is working in a night club in Boston and knows all the angles."

Ponzi says he is broke at the moment. His clothes are not of the latest cut and he is sharing a modest apartment with a cousin.

But he is scraping together pennies and dreaming of the great days when Americans and Italians poured a stream of gold into his flimsy financial set up.

House 'Jack'

WILL UNBUILD

New York, Nov. 24 (INS)—Plans were made today to pull down the old house in 12th street, Brooklyn, which the late Jacob Herle built in 1860 and in which his daughter, Louisa Herle, lived until her recent death.

Although a dingy old house, its razing is expected to produce a fortune. Every nook and cranny in the walls and floors will be examined.

Searchers in the cellar found $519,317 in bank notes, cash and uncashed checks yesterday. So far the old house, now under heavy guard, has produced $750,000.

White Robed Slayer

GLIDES TO DEATH CHAIR

Columbus, O., Nov. 24 (INS)—Cloaked in a flowing white baptismal robe so that he could "die like Jesus," Isaac Mosley, 25, Cincinnati Negro, today had paid with his life in the electric chair at Ohio Penitentiary the penalty the law demanded for a murder.

Tall and lanky, Mosley provided one of the most unusual scenes in the history of the death house when he walked into the execution chamber clothed in the white robe with a black cord around his waist.

Mosley, convicted of the murder of Abraham Wartik, a Cincinnati furniture dealer, had refused his last meal for a time, but consented to eat when a guard offered him a heaping plate of ham and eggs.

Delay Gloria Plea Mother Fights On

High Court To Pass on Custody

Will Decide Whether Child Remains State Ward

New York, Nov. 24—Counsel for Mrs. Gloria Laura Vanderbilt were restrained by a technicality today from filing the papers by which she hopes to wrest custody of her daughter, Gloria, 10, from the child's aunt, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney. They will be filed next Friday under an appelate court rule.

Holding that the order of custody under which he awarded little Gloria to her aunt on school days and her mother week-ends is a completely legal finding in the litigation, the jurist placed the onus of proving otherwise squarely on Mrs. Vanderbilt's lawyers.

It was revealed that he will not appear before the appellate division next Friday, when the mother's lawyers seek the writ of mandamus under which they hope to force Justice Carew to alter his decision and either grant or deny Mrs. Vanderbilt's plea for immediate and full custody of her daughter.

Neither will he file briefs to uphold his stand in the weird finale of the spectacular court fight for possession of the little heiress who becomes an "orphan of the state" under his order of custody. He will forward a note to the higher court and if the appellate division decides he has erred, he will rectify that error under the appellate division's instructions.

Mother's Hope

Today's appearance would have consisted of the filing of the order by Presiding Justice Edward R. Finch, requiring Justice Carew to show cause why he should not revise his ruling. It was served on the jurist yesterday.

Upon this order, hangs the mother's hope of re-opening the case, and proceeding with the fight which she has declared she will carry "through every court in the country if necessary to regain custody of my child."

Her lawyers contend that when the jurist made little Gloria a ward of the state and failed either to deny or grant Mrs. Vanderbilt's application for a writ of habeas corpus to regain the child, then barred such an appeal. The mandamus action is to compel Justice Carew to rule one way or the other to remove all possible legal barriers to the appeal.

SECRET! 100 Years on

CHURCH TOP

Distinguished churchmen looked on eagerly yesterday when the gilt ball atop the weathervane of the Old North Church was taken down and opened.

Since 1847 the ball's contents had been unknown, beyond the fact that there were papers and documents placed inside them when the steeple was replaced in 1807.

They remained practically unknown after the opening ceremony yesterday, for the search party found only a water-soaked, indecipherable wad of paper pulp.

Records of the church showed that the ball was opened in 1847 but merely stated that "the contents were returned without being disturbed."

Worse, a thin sheet of copper removed yesterday showed that one John Anderson, a workman, had opened the ball in 1884 to have a look, but he left no comment either.

On the theory that the early church officials had no particular reason to fill the ball with water-soaked pulp, the 1934 openers are going to dry the papers out and attempt to decipher them.

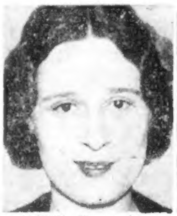
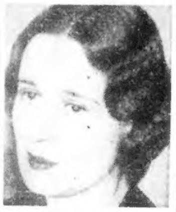
GOOD MOTHER OR BAD?

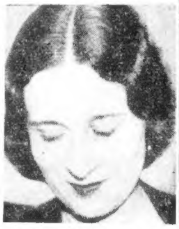
What Can Be Read in These Four New Pictures of Mrs. Gloria Vanderbilt?



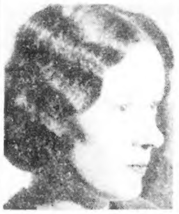
GAIETY—Humor, also, are apparent characteristics of Mrs. Vanderbilt.



SUFFERING — The prolonged hearing over the custody of her daughter has left its marks plainly on the fairest of the famed "Morgan sisters."



TENDERNESS — Mona Lisa and mother both might be read in this charming pose.



COURAGE—Psychologists glimpse here the resolution that is sustaining the young widow of Reginald Vanderbilt in her fight for her daughter. (All pictures by International News Photograph Service.)

McCORMICKS WIN Rockefeller Riches

Krenn Loses $12,000,000 Contest

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Nov. 24 (A. P.)—The three children whom Edith Rockefeller McCormick slighted in her will to favor her Austrian protege, Edwin D. Krenn, were labeled the rightful heirs to a $12,000,000 trust fund in a referee's recommendation to a New York court today.

Cutting no slice of the pie for Krenn, the referee prescribed equal parts of the fund for Fowler McCormick, Muriel McCormick Hubbard of New York and Mathilde McCormick Oser, whose marriage a decade ago to the Swiss riding master started a rift between mother and daughter that was unhealed for years.

The $12,000,000 was a dowry gift from John D. Rockefeller, Sr., to his daughter when she was wed to Harold F. McCormick, harvester millionaire, uniting two great American fortunes.

Divorced from McCormick, estranged for nearly a decade from her children, the lady who once was America's wealthiest and the social empress of Chicago, died in 1932 leaving a will that split her decimated fortune on a 5—4—2—1 basis—five shares to Krenn, her partner in luckless real estate ventures and her constant friend and escort after her divorce; four shares to Mrs. Elisha Dyer Hubbard, two to Mrs. Max Oser and one to Fowler.

Muriel came into court here demanding her grandfather's trust fund to her mother be divided among the three children, she to gain a four-sevenths share. Krenn claimed five-twelfths.

But Referee Robert M. C. Marsh agreed in his decision today with the children's counsel, that Edith Rockefeller McCormick's will failed to specify a four-way cut of the paternal trust fund and therefore, in accordance with the dictates of John D. Rockefeller, it must be divided equally among her children.

Deere Hunte

WITH YE BOWE & ARROWES

Madison, Wis., Nov. 24 (US-INS)—Led by a modern diana, in the person of Mrs. Aldo Leopold, a party of hunters left here today to stalk the white-tail deer with primitive bows and arrows.

The state conservation commission—probably the first instance in American history—has declared an "open season" for bow and arrow hunters, but it extends only for five days. During this period gun hunters are barred.

Mrs. Leopold is wife of Professor Aldo Leopold, research director of the Arboretum of the University of Wisconsin. For several years she has held the women's state archery championship.

The professor also is an expert bowman and the two sons of the couple, Starker and Luna, have been trained in archery since childhood. With them on their hunt harking back to Puritan days are several other devotees of this ancient form of marksmanship. By tomorrow it is expected that a score or more archers will be in the field against the white-tail deer which have become a nuisance to the farmers of Sauk and Columbia Counties.

In recent years gun hunting has dwindled as the nimrods lost interest because of a number of circumstances. Allotting a period to the bow and arrow hunters was an experiment which if successful this year will mean a longer period another year.

Today's hunters manufactured their own equipment.

B-R-R-R! Winter Chill

DUE TODAY

With the temperature dropping fast from the Indian Summer weather of the past few days the Weather Bureau forecast yesterday that today would bring "normal" pre-winter weather.

The official forecast for today reads: "Fair and much colder with temperature near freezing."

Although November's Indian Summer failed to run true to form this year, the past nine days of the month have been unseasonably warm, in contrast with November of last year, which was the coldest on record since 1873.

The temperature this month has been in the 40-50 degree to date, with an average to date of 44 degrees. The warmest November on record was in 1927 when the average temperature was 50 degrees. Yesterday the thermometer dropped from 58 at 6 a. m. to 47 at noon.

ON GAY DAD

Pontiac, Ill., Nov. 24 (INS)—Charging his father, Clinton M. McWhorter, a blacksmith, with disorderly conduct, Norman McWhorter had a warrant sworn out naming his father as a participant in a whoopee party.

Because the girl in the case was of age, and because she and McWhorter were in the company of others, the charfges were dismissed.

Baroness and 4 Others Believed Slain in Tropical 'Paradise'

ENGLISH WRITER TELLS OF LOVE INTRIGUE ON ISLE

of Lorenz and Nuggerud were found by Capt. Rodriguez, skipper of a California tuna smack.

Raysbrook, who had investigated thoroughly conditions on the islands, wrote:

"I have been living on the Galapagos Islands for the past several months and have been constantly in contact with all the parties in an island drama which has possibly ended in the death of five persons.

"The Baroness Bosquet De Wagner Wehrborn of Austria and France, Phillipson, a German, and Lorenz, another German, are the three principal characters.

"These three came to the Galapagos Islands about three years ago from Europe, taking up their abode on Charles Island.

DISTINCT GROUPS

"Living on the same island for some time previous had been Frederick Ritter and a woman called Dore Strauch Koerwin. She was supposedly his wife. Both came from Germany. (They are the celebrated nudists).

"A little later came another man, Frank Wittmer. With him was a Miss Walbrol and two children.

(Editor's Note: Previous dispatches have called the woman with Wittmer his wife, although she sometimes is known as Miss Margaret Walbrol and was known by this name by other colonists. The two children are an infant and a boy, 14, blind, said to be Mrs. Wittmer's by an earlier marriage.)

"Thus there were three distinct units on Charles Island. During the three years they lived together on this island they maintained no friendly communication with each other, each living apart and maintaining open hostility to one another.

"The baroness before coming to the Galapagos Islands had operated a small shop in Paris in partnership with Lorenz. They agred to sell out and come to these islands, Lorenz to act as her servant so as to enable her better to maintain the dignity of baroness whenever the occasion arose.

"But before leaving Europe she formed a friendship with Phillipson. This friendship was the cause of the bad feeling which eventually broke into open hostility among this trio. Phillipson constantly quarreled with Lorenz. Lorenz said ofttimes Phillipson resorted to blows, beating him up.

LORENZ EASY VICTIM

"Lorenz was an easy victim to these attacks owing to poor

"Often Lorenz informed the baroness that he desired to get away from it all and get back to Germany.

"This he never was allowed to do, he said. The baroness refused to provide him with the funds that he was entitled to out of the former business, he told us, she holding on to all that any keeping Lorenz in the background whenever any opportunity presented itself, such as when a schooner visited this island, which of course was a rare occasion, or when a passing yacht paid them a visit.

"To the latter the baroness always made herself very affable and theatrical, being endowed with certain capabilities making this possible.

"Many visiting yacht parties have found her quite interesting, she being able to converse in several different languages. This phase of her character somewhat detracted from the importance and patronage that Doctor Ritter had enjoyed from visiting yachtsmen previous to her arrival.

"Thus the unfriendly attitude towards each other. Ritter enjoyed holding the center of the romantic stage previous to her coming. This same feeling was held by the Wittmers also, but to a somewhat lesser degree, they being more recent arrivals. But nevertheless it was apparent,

CONFLICTING STORIES

"The culmination of this island tragedy is that now the Baroness and Phillipson have been missing for a number of months, Lorenz telling one story of her disappearance and the rest of them telling it somewhat differently.

"Eventually Doctor Ritter made a statement (which I inclose) as vindication of what may be known.

"Lorenz gave the first news of the Baroness' disappearance to a young Swedish writer, Rolf D. Blomberg, who has been in the Galapagos Islands collecting flora and fauna for the museum in Stockholm. He had been living for some considerable time on Indefatigable Island (about 25 miles distant from Charles Island) with some Norwegians who use the remains of an abortive colony that was founded some years ago. The Norwegians make a precarious living fishing and cultivating.

"Mr. Blomberg, accompanied by one of these fishermen named Trygve Nuggerud, decided to go over to Charles Island as Mr. Blomberg had a latter to deliver to the baroness. The letter had been given to him in Guayaquil, Ecuador, by a former friend of hers.

"On their arrival in a small sailing boat they met Lorenz and he, in a very nervous manner, descriped how the baroness had gone away leaving him behind. He said he was very desirious of getting away. He said the baroness had left him some money, &c.

"Nuggerud agreed to take him back to Indefatigable Island with them and later to take him over to San Cristobal Island, where he might be able to take passage in the schooner that at times visits that island from Guayaquil.

"By a strange coincidence, on their way over they sighted this schooner heading from Chatham, so after having arrived at their destination, Lorenz further persuaded Nuggerud to take him over to the other island that night, this being a distance of about 35 miles.

"Mr Blomberg not caring to accompany them, they took along a young native Ecuadorian of about 18 years of age.

SEARCH IN VAIN

"Now since that day, which was July 13, nothing has been heard or seen of them, nor has any wreckage been found to indicate what may have happened to them." (Note: This has been superseded by discovery of the two bodies.)

"Several sear h parties have cruised around the most likely spots, and also the schooner on her return a month later visited some of the other islands for a clue, but with the same result.

"At the time of this writing, November 7, nothing can be explained and all hopes have been given up.

"Also, further questioning of the people on Charles Island leads to the belief they know more of what happenec on that island than they care to tell, and are shielding a crime that they know was committed for obvious reasons—for when told that probably Lorenz had been lost and drowned, one of them expressed the opinion that it was 'judgment upon him.'

"I am in a position to vouch for all that I have written here. At the present time I am residing on San Cristo.al Island in the hacienda of Mr. Manuel Cobos, whose family were the pioneers in these islands.

"Living nere also is Mr. Blomberg, but he will be leaving here tomorrow for Guayaquil and will take this letter, this being the first time for nearly three months that an opportunity has presented itself to send a letter, the last time being August 23."

LEGEND OF CRUELTY

The baroness is a legend of cruelty in Ecuador. It was related that a young honeymoon couple, cast ashore on Charles Island in a shipwreck, were put back to sea in a small boat without oars, food or drink.

It is also related that she carried a pistol, that she "shot any one who came in her way," and that she ruled her quarreling lovers, Lorenz and Phillipson, with an Amazonian hand of iron.

The story of the fighting among the members of the amazing South Seas love triangle was related in imperfect English by Dr. Ritter in the statement he wrote for Raysbrook. Ritter, who left his wife in Hamburg, Germany, and eloped with Dore Koerwin, who discarded her husband, wrote:

"A memorable day of Charles Island:

"On the 28 of March, 1934, at 10 o'clock a merry 'hallo' calling announced the visit of Mrs. Wittmer (Miss Walbrol) and Mr. Lorenz. Both came first for congratulating Dore with a birthday cake subsequently.

"But then the biggest surprise was the information the Baroness Bosquet Wagner and Phillipson have departed yesterday and that would have happened thus.

"At Monday afternoon they heard foreign voices at the neighbors and therefore supposed visitors there. The following morning at 10 o'clock the 'bar' (Ritter'sabbreviation for baroness) called at Wittmer's fence 'Lorenz may come down at once.'

"Lorenz, the companion of the 'bar' has had quarrel with the 'bar' and 'Phillipson' and was living since two weeks together with the Wittmers. In this very moment Lorenez was fetching wood with the son of Wittmer, and because Mr. Wittmer would have nothing to do with the 'bar' Miss Walbrol (Mrs. Wittmer) went to the feince and spoke with the 'bar.'

GOING AROUND WORLD

"The 'bar' told her in her usual theatrical vivacity that the American friends who were undertaking a world trip have come. That she and her 'husband' had an occasion to go with them to the South Sea. Probably they would stay on an island there because here would not be any business.

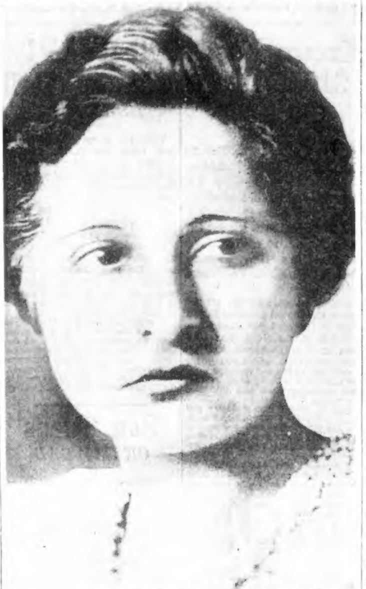
"Lorenz now could be the master of the dwelling. After have said that she went away in a hurry.

"The past week we had heard from Mr. Whittmer and Lorenz that the latter have been beaten by Phillipson with the fist, thus, that he suffered very much and were despaired because of the terrible dryness.

"Lorenz was visiting us again, telling us he left the 'bar' and would go back to Germany surely by the next occasion."

"One hour after the talk at the fence Lorenz and Harry (the Wittmer boy) were coming back with the wood and Mrs. Wittmer told Lorenz the talk she had with the 'Bar' but she added:

"He (Lorenz) shall not go down, because of she would believe, the telling of the 'Bar' would be only a feint for alluring him down which she try several times before-maybe in a pitfall."



BARONESS ELOISE DE WAGNER, self-styled "Empress of the Galapagos," who now is feared slain with discovery her cabin "palace" was plundered and wrecked in new mystery of "Adam and Eve" colony.

Governor's Council May Block Racing Here Next Year Under Joker in Law

EXPECTED TO CONFIRM ELY COMMISSION

But Members Are Ready to Hold Up Track Licenses Until Legislature Solves Tangle

Even if the governor's council approves Gov. Ely's nominations to the state racing commission tomorrow, Massachusetts may not have racing in 1935, it was discovered yesterday by the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

The disclosure came as opponents of the racing board nominees were preparing to go into a public hearing before the council tomorrow and furnish startling proof, it is understood, of campaign contributions made by racing interests preceding the recent election.

More than 20 witnesses, including General Charles H. Cole, nominated by Governor Ely as chairman of the racing commission; Walter E. O'Hara, Narragansett track owner, and Bayard Tuckerman, noted sportsman who no longer opposes the nominees, will speak before the council, it is declared.

BOARD DUE TO GET O. K.

Meanwhile, the report persisted yesterday that the governor's council will approve each of the nominations made by Ely—those of General Cole and of the proposed associate commissioners, William H. Ensign of Westfield the governor's home city, and Charles F. Connors of Brighton, a Boston broker.

But whether the council confirms the appointees or not, a possibility is, it was learned yesterday, that 1935 horse racing is "out" in Massachusetts, although dog racing may be possible.

Should the council approve the makeup of the board, it will recommend, it is understood from a confidential source, that nothing be done in the way of granting horse or dog racing licenses until after the 1935 Legislature has ironed out jokers in the racing bill—and there are declared to be plenty of them.

As an instance, the bill provides that none but Massachusetts citizens be employed at any track in the track operation. Yet there is no Massachusetts citizen who can run a pari-mutuel machine, nor is there any who can run the totalisator.

This is only one joker, and by the time the Legislature has the situation all straightened out and the way cleared for the study of applications for licenses, it is expected to be April, or even later.

OTHER DELAYS THEN

There will then be further delay in the issuing of the licenses, this being expected to consume another month.

No racing promoter will start building a track until he has his license, and construction of a track is a matter of months—and the bill provides that racing must terminate for the season in October.

Because dog tracks and their construction are as toys in comparison, it is possible that dog racing may begin next summer.

The matter of delay and slow action is due to the commotion raised over the whole racing affair. The governor's council feels, it is said, that the public will best be satisfied by careful, cautious and painstaking procedure.

As the council prepared for the momentous meeting tomorrow, reports of "deals" and "trades" continued to fly thick and fast yesterday.

The council, alarmed over the furore and impressed by the persistence of Conrad W. Crooker, representing the 8000 Massachusetts citizens who first signed the racing bill referendum petition, will grant an open hearing to Crooker, it is understood.

Crooker himself proposes to bring General Cole, O'Hara and Tuckerman before the council to testify despite a letter sent Crooker last week, it was learned, by Tuckerman and reading:

"I advised you a few days ago, when you came in to see me, not to ask for a public hearing on the confirmation of Governor Ely's appointees to the new racing commission.

"I still think that in doing this you have added nothing towards the promotion of clean racing and I will in no way participate in or support such a movement."

ELY IMPATIENT

Gov. Ely has not yet indicated his position in the matter of a public hearing, but he has given evidence that he is getting impatient over the delay in approving his nominations. He has also declared that rejection of the appointees will result in his dropping matter and making no further appointments for a racing commission.

addition to the matter of the ng commission nominations, the nor's council will have also e it tomorrow the question of an of 38 other appointments already by Governor Ely, and receipt of a possible new batch of nominations for other offices.

Two appointments pending that are attracting attention are those of Frederick W. Enwright, Lynn publisher and J. Paul Keefe of Boston. Enwright, a bitter personal foe of Governor-elect James M. Curley, is up for confirmation as trustee of the State Infirmary in Tewksbury. Keefe has been named as a member of the Boston Licensing board to succeed the late Arthur J. Selfridge.

Among the new appointments, much of the "trading" talk surrounds, and for the most part, they concern about 15 major positions where the commissions of incumbents expire on Dec. 1 and 2.

It is expected that Frank E. Lyman, present chairman of the public works department, salary $7500 a year, and former Republican House chairman of the ways and means committee, will be one of the fortunate ones.

In this group are two other outstanding positions, chairman of the public utilities commission and chairman of the metropolitan district commission. Henry T. Atwill of Lynn, former Republican attorney general, holds the former, and David B. Keniston, a former Republican member of the House, the other. The salaries are $8000 and $8500, respectively.

For "going through" on some Democratic appointments pending, the Republican councillors, led by Bacon, it is reported, are boosting Fred Butler, Bacon campaign manager, for one of these two positions.

There is also a battle over the nominations of Edgar L. Gillett of Canton to be commissioner of agriculture in place of the present commissioner, Arthur W. Gilbert. Both Gillett and Gilbert are Republicans. Gillett is at present head of the animal industry division and the alleged "trade" there is to slip the old Democratic warhorse, Charles A. Riordan of Sharon into Gillett's place. The Grange has come to the defense of Gilbert.

FIVE IN BAY STATE SHARE IN $50,000 RACE SWEEP PRIZES

Three Brighton Women Win $20,000; Taunton Boy Who Saved Pennies for Ticket Gets Similar Amount; Other N. E. Winners

Four Greater Boston residents and a 9-year-old Taunton boy walked off with a $50,000 share of the $130,000 major prize money of the Canadian Army and Navy Sweepstakes on the Manchester November Handicap, Manchester, England.

Three Brighton women, holding a joint ticket, and the Taunton boy held tickets on Jesmond Dene, 8 to 1 favorite in the big race, to win $20,000 prizes.

An Arlington man took the third prize of $10,000 with his ticket on Free Fare, 100-9 shot in the handicap.

Pipemma, a 100-9 outsider, on whom an Indianapolis man and a penniless New York widow held tickets, led the field of 29 horses home to give them the two major $30,000 prizes.

Nine other New Englanders, four from Greater Boston, won prizes of $2,500 each for tickets on starting horses in the race. In addition, five Greater Bostonians won $165 each for tickets on non-starters and 73 other New Englanders won $100 consolation prizes.

"3 BLACK CROWS" LUCKY

The three Brighton women, who bought a ticket under the nom-de-plume, "Three Black Crows," are all domestics employed in the home of Dr. Henry S. Rowen, former City Hospital trusted, of Bennett street. They are the Misses Mary and Winifred Kilgariff, sisters, and Mrs. Amelia Clifford.

For a time yesterday the women refused to see anyone. Positions were reversed later and Dr. Rowen's daughter answered all callers at the door to say that the Misses Kilgariff and Mrs. Clifford were not at home.

They relented finally and agreed to see visitors. Miss Mary Kilgariff acted as spokesman for the trio. She said:

"This is the first time we won although we've bought many sweepstakes tickets. But it was our first try on the Canadian sweep. It's a little early to say what we plan to do.

"Maybe we'll travel. Our mother is still in Ireland and we may go to see her. But we won't give up our jobs. The money is a nice little nest egg. We plan to divide it equally. We're all tickled to pieces."

FIRST THOUGHT A PONY

Members of the Rowen family were equally jubilant over the good fortune of the three women and were the first to congratulate them. They have been employed in the house for several years.

Nine-year-old William Powers, Jr., of Granite st., Taunton, was equally overjoyed at the news his ticket on Jesmond Dene had brought him a $20,000 fortune. His first thought was that he could purchase a pony for himself.

He was getting a haircut at the barber shop of his Uncle Edward in Washington street when he first received the news of his good fortune. After saying he would at last be able to get his pony, he became more serious.

"I'll be able to go to college when I grow," he said. "And my sister Marguerite can go, too."

William bought the ticket with money that he earned running errands in the neighborhood. The lucky purchase followed one that his father had made and followed, also, a talk with his mother, who handles all her son's finances.

Third prize of $10,000 was won by Everett Marston, of Appleton st., Arlington, with his ticket on Free Fare. Marston was just returning from a business trip to Maine and his wife was doing the week-end shopping when the news of their good fortune arrived.

The couple have no children but their niece,, Nancy Marston, 6, lives with them.

"I'm going to put this away and save it for a rainy day," Marston said. "It means that little Nancy can go to college but we're going to take care. I believe in looking to the future for the rainy day. It may seem like a lot of money but I guess we won't lose our heads about it.

Winners of $30,000 first prizes in the sweep were Mrs. Bessie Scheffer, widowed mother of two children, of West 111th st., New York City, and J. M. VanDyke, of North Capitol, Indianapolis, Ind. Mrs. Scheffer, who has been struggling to make a home for her two children, could only gasp:

"I'm so happy."

Winners of $2500 for tickets on horses starting in the race but not finishing in the first four places included four Greater Bostonians. They are W. C. Hanham, of Warren st., Allston; Bella Epstein, of Seafoam ave., Winthrop; Michael Timmons, of Wheatland st., Somerville, and Jean Chisholm, of Sharon st., Medford.

Other New Englanders winning $2500 prizes are Mrs. Zelia Chabot, of New Bedford; W. J. Dawn, of Jefferson; Mrs. A. E. French, of Haverhill st., Lawrence; Harry Miller, of Fitchburg, and William G. Williams, of Ludlow, Vt.

Groomed for $20,000 Prize

DAD OF 6 LOSES JOB, ENDS LIFE

William H. Anderson, 40, of Lynnfield street, South Peabody, father of six children, committed suicide yesterday because he lost his job, police say.

Anderson was found unconscious by his 12-year-old son, Elliott, slumped over the wheel of his automobile, while carbon monoxide fumes poured into the car through a tube attached to the exhaust pipe.

Mrs. Anderson summoned police and her husband was taken to the J. B. Thomas Hospital where he died shortly after his arrival.

2 GOVERNORS NOW HOLD FATE OF KAMINSKI

Slayer Doomed to Die Jan. 20 Can Appeal First to Ely Then to Gov.-Elect Curley

Springfield, Nov. 24—Back in his cell at Hampden County Jail tonight after being sentenced to die in the electric chair, Alexander Kaminski had the doubtful satisfaction that he will be able to plead for clemency to two governors.

Should Gov. Ely be approached, only to turn down the appeal, the condemned slayer of a guard in the same jail may still appeal to Gov.-elect James M. Curley, who takes office on New Year's Day.

On the question of making an appeal, Kaminski's counsel, Edward J. Fenton, said tonight that he will make a decision "in a few days," after he further confers with his client.

Gunman, killer, Houdini of jails, Kaminski will be under constant surveillance in all his waking and sleeping hours for the next eight weeks, all the time that remains to him of life.

Kaminski twice broke to freedom from this jail. But he will not leave it again, officials say, until he goes, surrounded by guards, to the death house of State Prison in Charlestown 10 days before his execution—set today for the week of January 20.

In the same courtroom where he was convicted of murder and where his brother, during the trial, attempted to deliver him by bombing the court, Kaminski heard this morning the pronouncement of his doom.

He was a thin icicle, sharp, cold.

He showed no sign of emotion. When Clerk Charles M. Calhoun inquired if he had anything to say before sentence was pronounced, he bit off a staccato:

"No!"

Ruthless killer, showing no remorse—one of the roughest and toughest specimens in the ranks of young criminals—Kaminski was attired like a student headed for a dance, in close fitting Chesterfield, dark suit, black shoes and socks, black and white striped tie.

Four deputies surrounded him in the cage, taking no chances. Judge Nelson P. Brown, who presided at his trial, and later at trial of the Millen brothers and Abe Faber, whom he must also sentence to death, made a special trip from Worcester to pass sentence.

The entire proceedings took no more than five minutes.

Fechner to View Vermont CCC Dam

Montpelier, Vt., Nov. 24—Robert Fechner, director of emergency conservation work, will arrive here tomorrow and will remain until Tuesday to attend the dedication of the Winooski Valley project dam, constructed by CCC men. He will leave for his home in Boston Tuesday after the exercises.

ICKES LINES UP WITH MOFFETT HOUSING PLANS

Private Capital Victory Seen; Roosevelt "Truce" Jumps 2000 Million in Projects

and "Left-Wingers" backing Ickes, began to marshal their forces for a bitter war on the question of government taking over the construction of low cost houses.

The conference at the White House lasted an hour and 25 minutes. The meeting was held in the President's private office. From 10:30 until nearly noon three remained closeted, and when they emerged at noon, Ickes and Moffett drove together from the grounds.

As they left the White House there was no evidence of bitterness, despite Moffett's open denunciation yesterday of the Ickes plan, which, he said, would "wreck the federal housing program," and knock the bottom out of the mortgage and real estate market.

Meanwhile, though definitely dead insofar as it would compete with private capital, the Ickes program awaits presidential decision as to its scope. That Ickes is strongly entrenched in the administration is conceded, and it was regarded as likely some more moderate plan to apply the proposal to areas where private capital would not be interested may be developed.

Alarmed at the conflicting views of Moffett and Ickes, and confessing themselves further puzzled by the joint statement, Washington representatives of the Structural Clay Products Industry, representing 2,000 factories, tonight demanded a clear-cut declaration of government policy.

They made it plain they support Moffett and his efforts under the National Housing Act, but see disaster in the Ickes plan.

Rhode Island Law Chief Spurns Walsh Death Quiz

Providence, Nov. 24—Expressing surprise at reports he was probing the alleged "cement barrel murder" of Daniel Walsh, wealthy Rhode Island sporting figure, after $40,000 ransom was supposedly paid for him in a Boston hotel, Atty.-Gen. John P. Hartigan today said he had taken no action in the case.

The story of the alleged kidnaping and ransom was told yesterday during testimony before the Supreme court in the case of George Press, of Providence. Press is seeking to have the State alcoholic beverages commission prevented from barring him from employment with a liquor firm. The court has reserved decision.

Atty.-Gen. Hartigan expressed amazement today when asked what progress had been made in his investigation of the Walsh story. He said:

"Investigation? Why I'm not making any investigation of that. It hasn't even been called to my attention."

75 U. S. LIQUOR TAX AGENTS TO BE OUSTED IN SHAKEUP

Changes Announced as 6 Raids Are Made to Halt Smuggling of 'Taxless' Alcohol in New England.

By JAMES J. SMITH

Copyright, 1934, by the Boston Sunday Advertiser

Seventy-five of the 100 federal liquor tax enforcement officials in New England will be replaced on December 1 in a drastic shakeup.

This disclosure was made yesterday as six new raids marked the slow progress of a drive by combined federal enforcement agencies to turn back the tide of untaxed alcohol and phoney, untaxed whiskey flooding New England.

The changes will be made in the Bureau of Industrial Alcohol, New England division, under Special Agent Robert W. Coyne.

There will be virtually a 100 per cent turnover of the force in Boston, although Coyne retains command.

Dennis Lorden, chief raiding officer, and Edward Kelley, his assistant, are among those scheduled to go.

SIX MONTHS' TRAINING

The replacements, resulting from new federal civil service examinations ordered by Washington, will bring inexperienced men into the enforcement field here, necessitate a primary training period of six months for the new men—and so open even wider the present avenues of alcohol smuggling and illicit liquor traffic which are costing the states and the federal government hundreds of thousands of dollars every month in avoided taxes.

Conditions are so bad, primarily due to the great reduction in the coast guard patrol division in this area, that Collector of the Port Joseph A. Maynard admitted yesterday that Massachusetts is overflowing with smuggled alcohol, tax unpaid, and with cheap whiskey manufactured from it, tax unpaid.

RINGS BACK IN TRADE

Prohibition's big rum running rings, that disintegrated with repeal, are back in the business for the huge profits.

Six raids yesterday at Rutland, Vt., and the recent seizures of alcohol at Hingham, Bourne, Manomet and aboard a fast runner off Gay Head are all part of a drive planned by Collector Maynard, Deputy Collector Thomas F. Finnegan, Coyne and the coast guard authorities of this area.

Discouraged by the "economy" slash in the coast guard fleet, the federal leaders, conferring on new plans for the drive against the smugglers, were so greatly concerned with the announcement of the impending shakeup among the alcohol division agents.

Washington's recent order that these agents should have at least a smattering of law training, and that none could continue in their posts without taking new federal civil service examinations has resulted in a condition tantamount to a complete change in the enforcement set-up here.

SIGN UP NEW MEN

Captain W. R. Sayles, assistant deputy commissioner of the Bureau of Industrial Alcohol, was in Boston yesterday, following a trip from Washington, interviewing the men who will make up the new personnel of the unit. Many of these are young men with no other qualifications for the job than a legal training.

Almost without exception they are unacquainted with New England racket groups and have no experience in dealing with smuggling operations.

The impending changes, particularly in view of the increasing smuggling menace and the present drive to stamp it out, are "unfortunate," in the opinion of the high enforcement officials.

There is some chance that Lorden and other veterans may retain their posts if they take a special examination to be held for agents coming in the supervising class.

BLOCKED BY ECONOMY

In New York, where a similar shakeup is coming, the agents who face ousting will carry the fight for their jobs to the Supreme Court.

There is no bright prospect of getting a bigger patrol fleet or a larger enforcement group because of government "economy" although it is admitted by the enforcement officers that a few thousands of dollars spent in this direction would save the government a sum actually in the millions in taxes now being avoided.

The federal agents will "carry on," however, as best they can.

In this spirit yesterday, a group of Coyne's men under Agent Harold Henneberry made six raids in Rutland, Vt., arresting three men and three women on charges of selling non-taxpaid liquor. Four others face arrest.

The Rutland liquor seized was phoney whiskey made from alcohol smuggled by car across the Canadian border.

Santason and Advertiser Comics Found at Pole Eager for Parade

IN ONE OF ITS MOST enterprising moments, the Boston Sunday Advertiser chartered an aeroplane to carry Miss Ann Marsters and a staff photographer to Santa Claus' icy palace on the very tip of the North Pole. An exclusive story of Santaland and the forthcoming visit of Santason to Boston in the annual parade next Thursday was the result. There, in Santa Claus' workshop, the eye-witness also discovered that Santa and his son had brought to life the comical characters which adorn the new 20-page Comic Weekly of the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

In one of its most enterprising moments, the Boston Sunday Advertiser chartered an aeroplane to carry Miss Ann Marsters and a staff photographer to Santa Claus' icy palace on the very tip of the North Pole. An exclusive story of Santaland and the forthcoming visit of Santason to Boston in the annual parade next Thursday was the result. There, in Santa Claus' workshop, the eye-witness also discovered that Santa and his son had brought to life the comical characters which adorn the new 20-page Comic Weekly of the Boston Sunday Advertiser.

By ANN MARSTERS

Santaland, North Pole—It is a land of glittering snow and ice. It is a land of strange wonders and curious happenings. It is where Santa Claus lives in his immense castle which rises high into the northern sky.

To enter the castle you must pass under a huge archway dripping with icicles and guarded by two reindeer who will politely ask your business. If it is with Santa himself, they will make excuses, saying that Santa Claus is so busy, right now, that he can see no one. But if you insist, you are led through silvery corridors and up frosty stairways until you come to Santa Claus' work shop.

Here is Santa Claus surrounded by a great staff of helpers all busily at work. Here is the ruddy-faced, dark-haired son of Santa Claus. And here are any number of familiar figures moving and standing about the room.

Actually—Santa Claus had fashioned and given life to nearly all the lovable characters which scamper, Sunday after Sunday, through 20 pages of the Boston Sunday Advertiser Comic Section.

So you can easily guess that we were among friends.

It was Santason who showed us around and introduced us to the various characters—from Mickey Mouse down to Captain Katzenjammer.

Of course we knew what Santa Claus was muttering about. The whole atmosphere was electrified by the thought of the parade in Boston on Thanksgiving morning. Santason was restless and excited, because the parade is being planned in honor of Santa's little son. And the comics themselves were eager to be off on their flying trip with Santason—all the way from the North Pole to Boston.

The lively comics were in exceedingly good humor, both with themselves and with one another—all but Captain Katzenjammer who was discontentedly spinning around on a bicycle inquiring the way to Africa. Hans and Fritz were tormenting him almost to distraction.

Pa and Ma Perkins were having a playful argument. Skippy was there, looking utterly adorable. The Little King was trotting about. Barney Google was mounted on Spark Plug, who, outside the comic pages, is of an astounding size. Jiggs was there, and Maggie, too. Maggie was being surprisingly amiable.

Mickey Mouse was playing with Polly's wise looking cat. Mickey, in real life, is very big; about 10 times larger than the Perkins' cat. And towering above them all was Sully, the prize fighter, with a tremendously imposing chest.

They are a vain lot, these Sunday Advertiser characters. They are all longing to disport themselves before the thousands of children who will watch them while they travel through the streets of Boston on huge floats.

There will be 20 floats in all, and on them will be the most delightful and ridiculous and amusing people that you ever saw step from between colored pages. And there will be 20 bands playing to welcome Santason when he lands his plane promptly at 11 o'clock Thursday morning, at Charles River Basin. And you'll see, to your astonishment, 25 immense inflated clowns and animals—some of them 100 feet in height.

There has never been anything quite so wonderful before, and it is Santa Claus and his son, plus Jordan Marsh Co. who are responsible for it all.

When we were ready to leave Santa's workshop, Santason directed us back through the corridors and out to the arched gateway where our plane was waiting.

So we left the land of wonders, giving it a backward glance from the air, and there was the high castle glittering in the sun and Santason standing between the two reindeer waving goodbye.

But we'll see them again when they arrive at the Charles River Basin, here, promptly at 11 a. m., Thursday, setting a new record for the Santaland-Boston trip by transferring to planes.

Boston is making plans to welcome the Christmas flier in its usual hearty way. Especially the children are planning to gather on the Esplanade to greet Santason.

The parade of 20 floats, many large helium-filled balloons requiring from six to 36 men to hold them down, and all the comic page characters from the Boston Sunday Advertiser will escort Santason through Beacon, School, Washington, Summer, Essex, Washington, Boylston, Tremont, West and Washington streets to the Jordan Marsh store.

ELECTIONS AWAITED IN 22 CITIES, TOWNS

New Deal Still Bitter Factor in Campaign as Candidates Line Up for Civic Office

During the first two weeks in December, residents of 22 cities and towns throughout Massachusetts will go to the polls and cast ballots for candidates seeking offices of mayor, city council, school committee, and other governing posts.

The New Deal continues to be the main factor in the majority of the electoral fights, with all candidates seeking offices on a platform of reduced taxes, employment, and promising prosperity.

Fourteen cities and towns will go to the polls on Dec. 4. The seven remaining cities and towns will vote on Dec. 11. The only city not voting on these dates is Fall River, which with a change of its charter existent since 1854, will go to the polls on Dec. 18.

GLOUCESTER FIREWORKS

In Gloucester with 22 aspirants for four posts as alderman, and Mayor George H. Newell, seeking re-election over his opponents, John E. Parker, former mayor, and Weston U. Friend, an alderman, a hot fight is predicted until the polls close Dec. 4.

Thirteen candidates in Newburyport are scrambling to fill eight posts on the ward council and the school board.

Stiff opposition is afforded Mayor Archie J. Pratt, Republican, of North Adams, in his fight for re-election opposed by Walter F. Pringle, Democrat, and William Johnson, former mayor on the Independent ticket, along with James O'Neil, also under the Independent banner.

Fourteen candidates seek five offices in the city council, and four candidates, are running for two seats on the school committee.

In Leominster with no mayoralty fight to contend with, 19 are seeking offices on December 4, for five city council post.

In Taunton, 16 candidates are seeking eight posts on the city council and school committee in an off year election. The voters will also decide whether councillors be elected by wards rather than at large.

RUSH TO FILE PAPERS

In Quincy on December 4, elections will be held for the offices of mayor, councillor-at-large, school committee, and councillor from Ward 1. A vote will also be taken on the question, should the city accept contributory pensions provided half by labor and half by the city.

Mayor Charles A. Ross, is seeking re-election against ex-Mayor Thomas A. McGrath.

The largest vote in the history of the city of Gardner is expected at their election on December 4. Mayor James A. Timpany, is seeking a second term opposed by Walter L. Beaman, former city councillor.

There are 12 candidates seeking six seats for councillor-at-large.

Bitter mayoralty and aldermanic fights are being waged in Haverhill with Mayor George E. Dalrymple, seeking re-election in opposition to Former City Solicitor A. Franklin Priest.

Seeking re-election for his 30th mayor term, Charles S. Ashley, of New Bedford, is opposed by George E. Lilley, United States Commissioner, and Arthur Harriman, defeated several times before when he sought to unseat Ashley.

In Newton six candidates filed last minute applications yesterday, bringing the total of office seekers to 42.

The closing day found Aldermen Paul M. Goddard, Maynard Hutchinson, Charles Boyd and Donald Dana McKay without opponents. Henderson Inches, candidate for alderman-at-large from Ward 6, was also without an opponent.

Seven ward aldermen and nine aldermen-at-large will be elected.

Fifteen candidates seek seats in the board of aldermen in Melrose, including four aldermen-at-large.

Three candidates are seeking the office to be vacated by Mayor Stephen H. Foley. They are Frank R. Sweet, William A. Brennan, member of the city council, and Howard G. Smith.

There are 21 candidates for six posts as councillors-at-large and 10 for five posts as ward members.

50 Spies Killed, Depression Over, Says Bugs Baer

By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER

They're choosing up sides on the other side. Fifty spies have been executed in six months and the depression is over.

The Naval Conference becomes more important with each relapse. England doesn't care who has the biggest navy so long as it has twice as many boats. Japan wants one just as large and America refuses to run second in an elimination tournament.

We'll get there somehow. We always do. If they had double-crossed Paul Revere by hanging out three lanterns Paul was all set to put his hoss in a rowboat.

We will manage to stay neutral if George Cohan doesn't write another song and if some European diplomat doesn't convince us that there are three wars in a set.

OFFICER HELD IN AHERN KILLING

Murder charges were brought in Mexico City yesterday against Edouardo Moran Falcon, police officer who shot and killed Francis Ahern, 19-year-old Arlington student.

Ahern's body will reach South Station at 11.20 a. m. today and funeral arrangements are to be announced later.

Prosecution of Falcon, member of the Mexican capital's "technical police" organization, followed vigorous representations by United States Consul General Thomas D. Bowman.

Contending that the wounds in the front of the youth's body showed he had not attempted to flee police questioners, Bowman declared Falcon's story was untrue and demanded prosecution.

Even if convicted, the maximum penalty faced by the killer is 20 years of imprisonment.

Ahern, a Boston University student who was making a trip to Mexico with his uncle, Daniel Ahern, was killed Monday as police broke into an altercation with a hotel proprietor whom Ahern was apparently unable to understand.

Parents of the youth, Mr. and Mrs. Timothy Ahern of 52 Wyman terrace, Arlington, were prostrated at learning of their son's tragic death, and great indignation was felt by the American colony in Mexico.

Chaco Peace Plan Adopted by League

Geneva, Nov. 24 (INS)—The League of Nations assembly today adopted a report recommending a setlement of the Chaco war between Bolivia and Paraguay.

The vote was unanimous except for the abstentions of Paraguay and Bolivia, 46 states approving the report, which was altered last night at the insistence of Paraguay.

The Bolivian delegate stated his country would consider the recommendations favorably, and he promised a reply on the acceptance or rejection by Dec. 10.

BEANO RACKET IS THWARTED IN BROCKTON

Mayor, City Marshal Curb Plot by Insisting That Profits Split With Charity Groups

Brockton, Nov. 24—A political graft plot, in which racketeers, deprived of rum profits through repeal, aimed to clean up thousands of dollars by running "Beano" games in Brockton, was revealed today by city officials.

Apprised of the coup, Mayor Horace Baker and City Marshal James Morey, issued an order prohibiting the granting of licenses.

They made the reservation, however, that permits would be issued if the operators agreed to turn over to charity, the net proceeds of the game after running expenses and a small profit were deducted.

Involved in the attempt was a politician whose identity is said to be known.

It is alleged by city hall officers that the master mind of the "beano"—or "bingo" as it is also called—scheme gave a large sum of money to the politican.

PROBE IS PLANNED

The money was to pave the way and wipe out opposition to the unrestricted run of the town by the game's backers.

All worked smoothly, it is understood, and virtually the last barrier had been removed by the politician, when the mayor and the marshal learned of the matter.

They immediately turned thumbs down and said there would be no beano games in town unless charitable institutions got the proceeds.

It was revealed that the board of aldermen planned to sift the evidence and openly name the politician if certain persons will talk.

The underworld clique involved is the same that made a fortune in rum running, nigger pool and other illegal activities. Their sources of quick and easy income gone, they found "beano" profitable.

But they learned to their discomfiture that their path was not so easy, that venality did not exist among most of those they sought to subserve.

Failing in getting the secret protection, they broached a proposal to officers of the Patrolmen's Relief Association. To its leader, they offered a share in the income, saying it could be diverted to the charity fund of the organization.

SCORNED BY POLICE

Here again their efforts met defeat. Ears of police officers of the relief association were closed to the enticing proffer.

At this point Mayor Baker and Marshal Morey were informed.

In the meantime, the leader of the "Beano" group, unaware that the mayor knew of their presence in town, tried other means to establish.

They selected five choice locations in the heart of the business district, leased two sites, and took options.

The lessees were unaware of the nature of the business to be conducted and with alacrity closed the deals.

Once the leases and options were taken, the racketeers felt confident.

Then, to their dismay, the mayor and city marshal stepped in.

It has been rumored that certain policemen on the force had received money to permit the "Beano" games to operate, but no direct charge to that effect has been made.

CURLEY URGES BAY STATE MAYORS TO SEEK FURTHER FEDERAL RELIEF CASH

By JOHN GAVIN

James M. Curley yesterday told the Mayor's Club of Massachusetts exactly what the people may hope and onticipate when he becomes their governor.

Wholehearted applause greeted every statement.

About 50 per cent of the mayors of Massachusetts cities were present. All seemed anxious to cooperate.

Governor-elect Curley revealed:

That he thinks the federal government is about to contribute 50 instead of 30 per cent on public works undertaken in the interests of employment.

That a sweeping housing program is under consideration by him and his councillors.

That Maj.-Gen. Douglass MacArthur, army chief of staff, is favorably inclined toward the project to extend the East Boston Airport into Governor's Island and make it a genuine air base.

That such an enterprise would employ about 1000 men about six months.

Curley personally introduced a resolution putting the club on record as in favor of setting up a tariff wall against the products of nations that have not paid their war debts to the U. S. A.

He would have the tariff bring the costs as high as the minimum cost of production of the American article in competition, plus 10 per cent.

The resolution passed without debate, or a vote of dissent.

Andrew A. Cassasa, mayor of Revere, presided. Mr. Curley was the first speaker.

He began by saying he preferred payrolls to relief rolls, and in his recent trip to Washington, he found the national administration felt the same way.

Without using names, he said he found the administration in a liberal need as regarded public works projects. His statement that he expected 50 per cent federal aid in such projects was rather stronger than a hint.

He pushed his housing program. He urged cities and towns, with property fit for housing to build new homes. He favored slum elimination.

The governor-elect returned to his original idea of converting the public golf course in Hyde Park into a region of homes, as exclusively announced in the Boston Sunday Advertiser last Sunday.

He said 700 houses might be constructed there and Washington would help.

Mr. Curley asked mayors of the cities represented to put in for federal aid. And not be vicariously proud, and spurn the money their constituents need.

The Bay State's next chief magistrate advocated an extensive overflow sewage system, emptying into South Bay. He commented on the possibility of using certain Boston property in Squantum for residences.

Discussing his ambitious housing projects, he conceded there was opposition.

"Real estate owners and selfish interests are up in arms," he said.

Rather ominously, the governor-elect reflected that federal aid in certain forms might conceivably be curtailed or even shut off.

Falling in with his ideas about 50 per cent federal aid and an extension of housing, the mayors voted unanimously to appoint a committee to get busy.

Curley assured the gathering that if the committee moved fast enough he would take their recommendations to Washington within 10 days.

On the committee were Mayor Mahoney of Worcester, Mayor McDonald of Waltham, Mayor Quigley of Chelsea, and several others. They will foregather in the office of Mayor Mansfield of Boston, the chairman, tomorrow.

Incidentally, it was the first public meeting of the Mayor and the governor-elect since the election. They seemed quite cordial.

Curley Reveals Views on Women's Jobs in Chat With Society Leader

OFTEN SUPERIOR TO MEN, HE TELLS MRS. FRENCH

Objects to Married Women Holding Posts; Hopes to Raise Age Limit for Child Labor to 18; Deplores "Slavery" System

In this issue, the Boston Sunday Advertiser presents an accurate transcript of an extremely interesting talk between James M. Curley, the governor-elect, and Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French, who is prominent in society.

In its informality, the interview was almost chatty.

Mrs. French is a neighbor of the Curleys, although she never met the governor-elect before. She is a Republican. All her husband's people are Republicans. However, her interests are those of a woman interested in social welfare, rather than those of a political partisan. She is head of the Charlotte Cushman Club, and a director in many other philantropies. Like Mr. Curley, she seeks the establishment of economic justice. As her questions will indicate.

He'll try to find places for women in his cabinet. But he doesn't think much of childless wives working for the state.

He wants to shorten the hours of women in industry, and establish a minimum wage.

FROWNS ON SOCIALS

If he had his way, the universal age limit for children in industry would be 16, and later 18; and the needy would be able to qualify for the old age pension at 60, instead of at 70.

When he is governor, the accent will be on social service rather than society with a capital S; and he won't be available as a social lion; in any case not until he has served at least six months.

They're just a few ideas extracted at random from the rambling interview.

A reporter for the Sunday Advertiser went along to make notes.

Casually, as if he were still on campaign, Mr. Curley disposed of problem after problem.

HUMBLE IN SUCCESS

Without abracadabra, or mystery, he outlined his stand on many matters.

For instance:

He'd like to cut the board of trustees of the Boston Elevated from five to two.

He'd boost the port of Boston, with South America and the Far East in mind. Forget that European market for a while.

He's going to take the lead in organizing a close corporation of New England governors to forward the interests of this section.

With a humility that might seem strange to those who have winced under his savage irony, or experienced his occasional aloofness, he ascribes his own election to the potency of the New Deal.

HIS VICTORY NEW DEAL

Put in dialogue form, here's the interview:

MRS. FRENCH—What do you think of the fundamental significance of your splendid victory?

MR. CURLEY—It was a spontaneous endorsement of the New Deal.

MRS. FRENCH—What's that?

MR. CURLEY—Men and women have come to recognize the necessity of permanent employment for those willing to work. Such workers must get an adequate return for their labor. If American standards are to be preserved, there must be economic security.

MRS. FRENCH—In what specific way will you co-operate in the universal effort to lighten the load of women in industry?

MR. CURLEY—I shall ask the legislature to shorten the hours of working women, and establish a minimum wage for them.

WOULD AID MATERNITY

MRS. FRENCH—And what else?

MR. CURLEY—I shall ask that women be barred from night work in factories.

MRS. FRENCH—And then what?

MR. CURLEY—I shall recommend that women be prohibited from working two weeks before and two weeks after childbirth. Sounds melodramatic, but many women do that, in the mills.

MRS. FRENCH—What is the enlightened attitude toward children in industry?

CHILD LABOR INFAMOUS

MR. CURLEY—The use of children as factory-fodder is a national infamy. Development of automatic machinery makes them as valuable to a factory manager as adults. I'm against sweating the children for dollars and cents. I'd like to see boys and girls under 16 kept out of industry. In fact, if there is any chance of success, I shall advocate and forward a law keeping them out until they are 18.

MRS. FRENCH—What is your attitude toward women employed by the state?

MR. CURLEY—Sex doesn't enter. They have the same rights as the men.

MRS. FRENCH—And your attitude toward married women in public employ?

MR. CURLEY—Except in extraordinary circumstances, I think when a woman marries she forfeits her title to a place on the public payroll.

WOMEN IN CABINET

MRS. FRENCH—Even school teachers?

MR. CURLEY—All women.

(The governor-elect took time out. He explained it was his opinion 25 per cent of the women in good government jobs had husbands able to support them, and no children to be considered.)

MRS. FRENCH—Have you a concrete suggestion on the work-and-wages plan for the business college girls now out of work by thousands?

MR. CURLEY—I'm afraid not. Only a return of general prosperity will help.

MRS. FRENCH—Will there be women in your cabinet.

MR. CURLEY—I shall try to find places for them. I have a high regard for their ability. Frequently they are superior to men.

MRS. FRENCH—Equal to the men?

MR. CURLEY—I said superior.

WILL BOOST PORT

MRS. FRENCH—What will be the social policy at the State House with Miss Mary as First Lady of the Commonwealth?

MR. CURLEY—I feel that for the first six months I have no alternative but to decline all except the most pressing social engagements, and devote myself to a program of protection and relief.

MRS. FRENCH—Have you a plan for the improvement of the finances of the Boston Elevated?

MR. CURLEY—Frankly, I don't thing they're doing so badly. If I had a suggestion, it would be to cut the salaried trustees from five to two.

MRS. FRENCH—Are you going to have time as governor to help Boston as a port?

MR. CURLEY—I shall do everything I can. I await suggestions. Personally, I think the thing to do is build up a trade with Latin America and the Far East. I don't think Europe will be commercially imporant for a quarter of a century, so far as we're concerned.

TO EXPLOIT NEW ENGLAND

MRS. FRENCH — Will you work with other New England governors to build up this section?

MR. CURLEY—Already I've suggested that the six states contribute $100,000 each for the exploiation of New England as a vacation ground.

MRS. FRENCH — President Roosevelt has consented that his birthday, January 30, be observed by balls and festive gatherings. Are you in favor of extending the idea?

MR. CURLEY — Inasmuch as the President has stipulated that the proceeds be given to charity, I'd like to see such affairs promoted in every hamlet big enough to boast a church parlor or a town hall.

MRS. FRENCH—Do you think women have justified themselves in politics?

PRAISES MRS. PERKINS

MR. CURLEY—As much as we men have.

MRS. FRENCH—Are they realists, or idealists?

MR. CURLEY—Idealists, mostly. Without them most of the humanitarian legislation we enjoy would have been lost.

MRS. FRENCH—Is there an occasional realist among them, who thinks of politics in terms of a job?

MR. CURLEY—Isn't this lovely weather, considering the time of year.

MRS. FRENCH—What do you think of Secretary of Labor Perkins?

MR. CURLEY—A brilliant, capable and sincere woman.

MRS. FRENCH—Now, as to old age pensions?

MR. CURLEY—Write me down as definitely in favor. Only I'd like to see the age cut from 70 to 60 years in this state.

U. S. AID DUE STATE

MRS. FRENCH—Really, Mr. Governor?

MR. CURLEY—Lady, they start firing people out of industry at 38, and a man or woman of 45 has to hustle to get any kind of a job these days.

MRS. FRENCH—Pensions are the answer?

(MR. CURLEY turned craftily Yankee. He answered one question with another).

MR. CURLEY—The alternative is the humanizing of some of our industrialists. You don't expect me to do that?

MRS. FRENCH—You are in favor of getting all the federal aid you can for Massachusetts?

MR. CURLEY—Since my election, I have moved to secure such aid.

MRS. FRENCH — You don't think you are corrupting the people, or making them paupers?

MR. CURLEY—I'm not too proud to get back some of our own. Massachusetts pays heavy taxes. Other sections are getting aid—which they need, of course. I think we should get our share.

PEOPLE MUST NOT STARVE

MRS. FRENCH—In principle, you're against the dole?

MR. CURLEY—In principle, I'm for work-and-wages. But people must not be left to starve.

The lady arose. The governor-elect bowed. The assistant interviewer scrambled for his hat. The interview was over.

In the corridor, a group of friends and allies waited. Gov. Brann of Maine headed the flying column.

Life went busily on at Jamaicaway. Dominating everything was the mildly sardonic gentleman who began his career as a grocer's boy in Roxbury about 50 years ago.

attorneys as sure sign of an acquittal.

With 17 defendants to consider, it was reasoned that they could not reach any verdict, but a blanket acquittal in the short time.

The time of their deliberation contrasted sharply with the length of the case. The verdict came at the end of the eighth week of the trial.

The jurors who ended the government's drive to convict Insull and his associates had been sworn in Oct. 2.

The senior Insull was indicted Feburary 27, 1933 and the case assumed international notice with his nigera through Greece and over inland seas to Turkey where he was taken into custody.

State charges of embezzlement still face the aged Insull. His brother, Martin, is scheduled for trial next week. State's Attorney Thomas J. Courtney was in New York and unreachable. It was expected, however, that he would push the state charges despite the reversal the government saw today.

SHAKES HANDS WITH JURY

The turmoil following announcement of the verdict continued for some time. Wives, friends and relatives of the defendants made a mad rush to the defense table for happy, tearful embraces.

Insull, finding himself surrounded by a crowd seeking to shake his hand, made his way to the jury box and shook hands with each of the jurors as they filed out.

Insull's attorney, Floyd E. Thompson, said after the verdict:

"Of course I am most gratified, it is needless to say, at this verdict. I never had any doubt, however, that the jury could bring in any other. The judge's charge to the jury today was the most eminently fair that I have ever heard."

Dwight H. Green, youthful federal prosecutor in charge of the government's case:

"I have no comments to make except to say the government presented its case fully and we all gave the case the best we had in us."

Gardiner Shoe Firm Discontinues

Augusta, Me., Nov. 24—The R. P. Hazzard Co. factory in Gardiner will discontinue operation as soon as the shoes now in process are finished, according to an announcement made to the Gardiner Board of Trade, which owns the factory building, by R. P. Hazzard, president of the firm.

In a letter to the board Hazzard said the company found it impossible to sell a sufficient number of shoes "to justify us in continuing the operation of the Gardiner factory."

G.O.P. SHAKEUP SEEN AS BLOW AT RICHARDSON

Liberals in Party Moving to Replace National Committeeman to Regain Prestige

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Out of the coma caused by the devastating defeat suffered in the November election, an insistant demand for a complete reorganization of the Republican Party in this state is making itself felt.

If the party is to regain its prestige, it is felt in many quarters that a clean sweep must be made of the standpatters and men elevated to command with known liberal tendencies.

That the movement will be directed first against National Committeeman John Richardson and Chairman George G. Tarbell of the Republican State Committee appears certain. Tarbell is a protege of Richardson's, as was his predecessor in office, Carl Terry of Fall River, until Terry's resignation.

HOOVER LINK IRKS

Prominent party members have been convinced for some time that Richardson was bound up too much in a possible "comeback" of former President Hoover and that he was inclined to place national politics ahead of state success.

It is no secret that Gaspar B. Bacon, in the middle of the recent gubernatorial campaign, was importuned to break with Richardson and his advisers, strike out for himself, and take over complete command of the party here.

Whether or not Richardson rates it, much of the blame for the mistake for the Scarboro, Maine, speech in which Bacon flayed the New Deal, has been placed on Richardson's shoulders.

Only recently, Bacon was quoted as saying to a group of friends:

"My first political purpose now is to defeat John Richardson for re-election as national committeeman."

SEE BACON IN PICTURE

Those close to Bacon profess to see in his defeat not so much a personal repudiation by the voters as that he was a victim of circumstances. They don't regard him as out of the political picture by any means. Should the Governor-elect decide to go after the Democratic nomination for United States Senator in 1936, Bacon, they believe, would have to be considered for another try for the governorship.

Insofar as the new legislature is concerned, the Republicans have a majority of six and are sure to organize that branch.

Speaker Leverett Saltonstall is expected to be re-elected.

In the Senate the Republicans have a majority of one.

HOPE IS SEEN IN U. S.-JAPAN NAVAL TREATY

Dark Outlook in Three-Power Prospect Offset by New Ship Proposal

London, Nov. 24 (AP)—The possibility of a British-American informal accord on general naval policies in the event there is to be no new treaty offset somewhat today, from the American viewpoint, the feeling of hopelessness which had settled around the conversations here.

The question of such an accord, holding momentous implications, was still in the background. It had not been mentioned.

But the distinctly friendly relations of the two powers during the last few days, especially after Great Britain sided with the United States in declining to recognize Japan's demands for outright equality, have been taken by naval and diplomatic circles as an indication that an accord will be one of the first matters discussed after Japan denounces the Washington treaty.

Tokoy's denunciation of the treaty, which is the basis for the present 5-5-3 naval ratio, was expected shortly.

British quarters maintained reserve concerning their attitude, but permitted an intimation that an accord of this type would have a friendly reception if it were suggested by the Americans.

The British, however, are opposed to formal agreements with any one power because they wish to maintain the frinedliest relations with both Japan and the United States, it was stated.

Proposal to build a mooring basin at the easterly entrance to the Cape Cod Canal, adjacent to the north breakwater, will be considered by the Committee on Navigation and Maritime Legislation.

HITLER POLICY TOWARDS JAPAN ROUSES EUROPE

Fear New Embroglio as Russia Goes Over to France in New Allignment

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND

Copyright, 1934 by Universal Service and International News Service

[illegible] French [illegible] today [illegible] Europe that [illegible] vast Red army and great [illegible] force were ready [illegible] with and by side [illegible] French military machine against Germany—soon may be followed by the no less startling [illegible] announcement [illegible] similar counter "understanding" [illegible] between Germany and Japan against Russia in the event of a Russo-Japanese war.

The probability of some kind of an understanding between the two big world powers who withdrew from the league within a short time of each other is affirmed in more than one European chancellery.

The Soviet government [illegible] informed by those [illegible] in a position to know the views of Moscow, is so certain that "some kind" of pact exists between Chancellor Hitler and [illegible] that it was one of the [illegible] factors that brought [illegible] League of Nations.

What [illegible] that [illegible] Mussolini quite [illegible] belief in a [illegible] between Berlin and Tokio without presuming to know the nature of it.

U. S. IS INTERESTED

The French [illegible] to be expected in their [illegible] and readiness to believe anything about Germany [illegible] Less [illegible] cool [illegible] high British [illegible] to be [illegible] reports on the [illegible]

It is understood that Washington has [illegible] interest in reports [illegible] very close relations between [illegible] and Tokio.

High Moscow officials [illegible] they have grounds for the conviction that a German-Japanese secret understanding exists in documentary form. No concrete evidence of existence of such a pact has been adduced, though its very nature and the fact that both have left the League would naturally incline Germany and Japan to keep it most secret.

POLICIES PARALLEL

The Japanese have spoken only of "similarity of views" with Nazi Germany. The similarity of views has even found a parallel in Japan's tenacious demand for "equal security of national defense" and equality of naval rights in the Pacific with the United States and Great Britain.

This is parallel to Germany's demands for rights of military equality. Further similarity of views is seen in that both Berlin and Tokio say they will not rearm or built up to those rights when they are granted.

Hitler withdrew from the League to clear Germany's path to "equal rights in armaments." Japan announces abrogation of the Washington treaty to clear the way to equality of rights to a navy as the United States navy.

NAZIS MAY WED NIPPONESE

The extraordinary close friendship between Hitler and Japan is seen in the fact that the racially fanatical Nazi regime, which forbids marriages of Germans with non-Aryan races, bowed to the emphatic Japanese protest against stamping them as inferior, by informing the Japanese ambassador in Berlin that German women may wed Japanese.

Nazi racial experts [illegible] tried to establish that the Japanese are not Mongolian but were originally from Germany.

To the argument that Germany and Russia have no common frontier and therefore Germany could not attack [illegible], the Russians retort that Poland is a third member of the suspected bloc.

The sensational announcement in the French chamber jarred many nerves, continued today to reverberate throughout Europe, and is found to be most annoying and inconvenient: many efforts have been made to explain it away.

Millerand's Veiled Threat of Invasion

France, but which only for a took away from her in 1815 at the solicitation of Prussia of whom M[illegible] She had regard neither for principles of justice nor principles of decency.

Ownership of the Saar coal mines was ceded to France in compensation (says article 45 of the Versailles treaty) for destruction of the coal mines in northern France. It was only justice.

Destruction of two-thirds of the coal field zone of northern France was not the result of mere chance or a simple consequence of war operations. The German army acted systematically in accord with a premeditated plan of the German general staff.

As for the territory of the Saar Basin, its final prerogative was postponed by the treaty for fifteen years. During that period the government was entrusted to a commission representing the League of Nations.

At the expiration of the period in January [illegible] the population itself which will have the right to decide its own political destiny. A plebiscite will take place which all persons over twenty and who inhabited the Saar on June 28, 1919 participate.

[illegible]

[illegible] It is now a question of providing for the application.

The essential and prime condition for execution of the treaty provisions is that untrammeled freedom of vote be guaranteed to the Saar population. A condition that speaks for itself, but it is certainly easier to formulate than to realize.

Of course the treaty provided that it is the governing commission's duty to assure protection of persons and property in the territory and to maintain peace and order. It has even provided for organization of a local police force to keep order.

But it has become speedily apparent that the resources of the territory were insufficient for the commission to fulfill the role assigned to it. Since the beginning of 1925, the council of the League of Nations has had to occupy itself with this question.

One year later, March 18, 1926, the council received a report from the Italian delegate Count Dominico Lanza [illegible] who represented his country at Paris with great distinction for many years. He established that the territory's budget was insufficient for the commission to recruit and maintain the number of police necessary for a guarantee of security for the population and property.

The commission therefore asked for liberty to appeal in all cases of emergency to troops stationed outside the Saar, but near to its frontiers. It stated that this would coincide with the spirit of the treaty of peace. The council of the League of Nations decided likewise.

FANCE MAY INVADE

This then was how a new obligation for France was born: That of responding to an appeal which might be made by the Saar's governing commission for French troops to be sent in to re-establish order.

France earnestly hopes that there will be no such necessity. But she has neither the right nor the inclination to shun accomplishment of an international mission.

It depends on Germany and Germany alone whether the plebiscite takes place in the necessary conditions of order and dignity. The recent past furnishes, alas, too many reasons for being skeptical.

We must take into consideration that Hitler's foreign policy so far has brought him only disappointments. Anschluss with Austria was the immediate goal toward which his efforts pointed. In the very first lines of his book, "Mein Kampf," he indicated the capital importance this assumed in his eyes. We all know what resounding failure crowned his efforts.

ASSAILS HITLER

Without doubt he has not relinquished his ambitions, and the assassination of Dollfuss not having brought what he expected, he has now charged Von Papen to have recourse to other methods. But able and unscrupulous as his ambassador is, he needs some time.

Now the hour for the Saar plebiscite approaches, Hitler has taken every opportunity to declare that the result is not at all doubtful. A new failure would strike not only at his self-esteem, but at his authority.

Therefore the Fuehrer is hesitating at nothing in order to assure a favorable outcome. His action is becoming more and more intense as his adversaries find more and more motives in Hitler's policy to increase their resistance.

The murders of June 30 inspired in the Saar the same sentiment of revulsion and reprobation as every [illegible]—except in Germany. Hitler's religious policies, his strife with the Catholics, have provoked in the Saar as much unrest and indignation.

Then there is the feverish activity of the "Deutschefront," an instrument of propaganda richly subsidized by the Reich and seeking to dominate the life of the Saar. Trips to Germany are offered to workmen and students in the Saar at ridiculously low prices. The press is organized to influence opinion throughout the territory and to submerge the few independent [illegible]

Not to [illegible] the [illegible]

GERMAN ESPIONAGE

Germany has envisioned a system of surveillance — espionage would be more exact—which bears the name of "[illegible]" [illegible] of 10 or 15 families [illegible] under the surveillance of [illegible] whose mission is to report to the "Deutsche front" [illegible] the places they frequent [illegible] newspapers they read [illegible] difficult to imagine a [illegible] nant or detestable regime.

If, however, the Nazis are convinced that the Saar [illegible] and that the plebiscite will [illegible] majority for maintenance [illegible] status quo [illegible] stage a putsch [illegible] front Europe with [illegible] fact.

I fear that there will be no such hesitancy. Documents [illegible] the Saar commission has [illegible] proof that such a [illegible] already been conceived and the preparations have been made to carry out the idea.

Has not Germany's [illegible] armament been significant?

It was certainly of this that Edouard Benes was thinking when he said in his recent [illegible] Czechoslovakia Parliament:

"The international situation is grave. It is grave in its atmosphere of uncertainty, in which even the tiniest event might easily produce the effect of a bombshell."

Let us hope that the [illegible] prevent [illegible]

FOLEY WIRES MAYOR

[illegible]

"Hopkins stated he was too tied up here to talk about Boston, but would be glad to do so in Washington.

"He stated publicly to Mayor J. Fred Manning of Lynn substantially as follows:

"NOT A DIME FROM STATE"

"'Probably the cities of Massachusetts have carried a larger portion of the relief load than the cities of any other state, but the state itself has not contributed a thin dime.

"'If I were asked by you tomorrow to increase the federal relief grant to Massachusetts I would probably tell you to go to your State Legislature and make them do their share.'"

[illegible] Hopkins' remarks [illegible] the National Economy League [illegible] declared:

"Mr. Hopkins is as muddled on the petition we submitted to the President as he is on many other matters."

Girl Who Never Sought Career Now Finds Herself at Stage Peak

Mitzi Mayfair Just Took Opportunities as They Came Along

By ANN MARSTERS

Things just seemed to [illegible] Mitzi Mayfair [illegible] as beckoned her [illegible] career, but [illegible] opportunities [illegible]

[illegible]

"I don't think it matters," said Mitzi, "where and why people are born, so I'll begin with my first stage appearance. I lived in Fulton, Kentucky. And next door lived the manager of the Grand Central Theater in St. Louis. One day he asked me to dance in his 'Kiddie Show.'"

[illegible]

"When it came to billing the numbers," she said, "the manager couldn't remember my real name, so he put down 'Mitzi Mayfair.' My real name is Emylyn Pique."

[illegible]

"I've stayed at hotels," said Mitzie, "where the management put up signs saying, 'Not responsible for pipes bursting.'"

SIGNED BY ZIEGFELD

[illegible] New York [illegible] Ziegfeld [illegible] George White [illegible]

"Ziegfeld told me I wasn't the type," Mitzi said, "but I coaxed and pleaded and finally he said I could do it. I didn't know the routine very well, but I went on and—I did all right."

[illegible]

"I sometimes wonder if I wouldn't be happier being a school teacher in a country town. I can't remember ever planning to go on the stage, but circumstances always seemed to be pushing me on."

NOW WANTS TO SING

[illegible]

"I wish," she said, "that I could sing as naturally as I can dance. I've never worked so hard over anything as I am over my singing. And the only trouble is, I can't sing—very well. I get stage fright every time I open my mouth.

"That's why I haven't accepted any movie offers. I want to be able to do more than just dance. The stage is wonderful experience, so I'm staying right here—for awhile."

And in conclusion Mitzi said: "Of course, I'm very glad I'm not a school teacher. I wouldn't want to be anyone else but myself, and I think I was fated to dance."

'BRANN MOVES FOR PROBE OF STATE PRISON

Warden Thurston Is Hit in Report as Lax; Ouster Is Demanded if Charges Are True

[illegible] 24—Governor Louis J. Brann [illegible] that an official probe be made of reported [illegible] [illegible] indicated to [illegible]

The [illegible] named Warden Raymond E. Thurston incompetent and said [illegible] should resign immediately [illegible] facts are true

[illegible] the Governor declared [illegible]

[illegible] however, the inquiry [illegible] by one of three [illegible] the Governor and his Executive Council, a legislative committee or Attorney General Clyde Chapman.

Governor Brann further feels [illegible] if the probe shows laxity by Warden Thurston [illegible] the conduct of prison affairs, he should be ousted.

The Governor wants to know why murderers should be shown alleged partiality and given the run of the prison, why three lifers escaped last August, why prisoners are reputed to be [illegible] guarded in certain parts of the place, and why high-jinks and card games should be permitted

GUARDS IN FEAR

Brann revealed that former convicts may be called to testify. Many reliable men are ready to furnish testimony, it was learned

"If conditions are as reported I feel that either the Governor and the Council or some other official body should make an investigation," Governor Brann declared

Executive Councillor Frank W Carlton today backed the Governor's move

Carlton pointed out that guards employed at the prison [illegible] testify for fear of losing their jobs. Residents in the vicinity, likewise will refuse to give evidence. They fear reprisal [illegible]

Carlton last week [illegible] that [illegible] Today the councillor threw more light on the situation.

"Lack of organization and discipline is the root of the prison evil," Carlton declared

"The law implies that the warden's job is a full time post of trust by a competent and trained men, and should not be passed on a political platter to Thurston or anyone else to do with as he likes as a reward for political loyalty to a group of politicians. Thurston and his friends don't want the place probed.

"I have no political axe to grind. There is plenty of ground for my position in this matter without taking politics into consideration. It is my fair and just conclusion that Thurston should be relieved

"I have learned that there is practically no supervision over inmates. Evidence from the inside confirms what I have gathered from the outside"

Warden Thurston emphatically denied the charges against his stewardship at Thomaston prison.

THURSTON'S VIEW

"I will compare the morale here with any penal institution in the nation," Thurston declared recently after the escape of three lifers sentenced for murder.

"I believe that the best way to treat a man in prison is as a human being. These men have made mistakes but most of them would not make the same mistake again if freed"

The escape of the convict trio last August resulted from the honor system he was obliged to put in force because of lack of cells, he said

"As long as there are insufficient cells, we will be obliged to depend on the honor system," Thurston added

"We have to pick out prisoners we think are most to be trusted and then we have to gamble on them. Conditions here the last few years have made it necessary for us to institute this policy."

The new developments climax the expose of affairs at Thomaston revealed by a former convict to the Sunday Advertiser last week

Today, from another ex-felon, was learned new facts of life at the institution

For some time, convicts were given milk from 12 deceased cows Then Warden Thurston, when informed of the matter, ordered the prison veterinary to make a test The animals were slaughtered

Prisoners at work in the hog house, situated half a mile from the state farm and two miles from the prison, are unguarded and are their own bosses. They have been making their own home brew It is reported that they are visited by women.

Allen A. Twitchell, lifer who escaped and was caught, is an agitator and continues as boss of the woodshed. Whenever any private work is to be done he demands money. Others on his force insist on cartons of cigarettes or they refuse to work

It was revealed that expert mechanics among the convicts are forced to repair and overhaul the automobiles of state officials. At one time a dozen such cars were seen under repair, it is said

CLUB INVITES 800 POOR TOTS

More than 800 poor children of Boston will be treated to a Thanksgiving dinner by Ben Ginsburg managing director of Club Mayfair Broadway, one of the city's swanky night clubs. There will be no bar to race creed or color

Because of the number to be fed there will be two sittings, at noon and 1 o'clock Miss Mitza Vernelle, stage and screen star, who currently is dancing at the Mayfair will be hostess and do the carving

A number of distinguished guests including Governor-elect James M Curley, Mayor Mansfield and District Attorney Foley have been invited to attend.

In staging the party for the children Mr. Ginsburg was moved by the sentiment that despite hard times none of the city's needy youth should go unfed on an occasion such as Thanksgiving Day

Tickets may be obtained from Police Capt. James Claflin, Division 4 or at the South End Democratic Club Washington street, Boston

Designed by Gutzon Borglum sculptor of the [illegible] national memorial being erected in the Black Hills of South Dakota, the medals will be cast in gold [illegible] and bronze

Final awards in the competition to aid the Mount Rushmore Memorial Commission to select suitable inscription for the [illegible] expected to be announced [illegible] national committee [illegible]

The awards were originally expected to be made public this month but the committee decided to defer [illegible] until Congress convenes This was done to assure fuller deliberation of the members of the committee in the decisions

The competition for the inscription was sponsored by the Hearst newspapers and attracted nationwide interest Students of public schools, colleges and universities contributed the bulk of the entries but thousands were received from adult men and women competing in the classification provided for them in the rules.

LYNN MAYOR IN PLEA TO SAVE SHOE INDUSTRY

Calls Meeting of 11 Cities to Demand Reopening of Code as Firms Quit in Protest

In an attempt to save the shoe industry for Massachusetts and the jobs of several thousand workers, Mayor J. Fred Manning of Lynn yesterday called a meeting of mayors of 11 shoe cities and representatives in Congress for the purpose of reopening the National Shoe Code

The meeting will be held at the State House Wednesday afternoon Gov.-elect James M Curley, Congressman William P. Connery, of Lynn, and Cong Edith Nourse Rogers are expected to attend

Unless the shoe code is reopened and the present differentials abolished, it is feared that Massachusetts shoe factories will move to other states where lower wages may be paid under the code.

SEEKS CODE REVISION

Mayor Manning said he planned to seek a revision of the code which would establish minimum wages on a nation-wide scope.

While Mayor Manning was issuing his call for the meeting 1000 shoe workers crowded Odd Fellows Hall in Lynn to hear Joseph Bearack, counsel for the United Shoe and Leather Workers Union, predict that "the code, if not revised, will ruin the entire shoe industry in New England."

Shoe manufacturers have been quitting Massachusetts at an alarming rate since the shoe code first became effective. Rural communities, especially in Maine and New Hampshire, have offered manufacturers here attractive locations, lower taxes, and other inducements, chief of which is cheaper labor

To meet these inducements, Massachusetts shoe cities have found it impossible. Mayor Manning proposes a 30-hour week and minimum wages on a nation-wide scale as the only hope of saving the shoe industry here

In Lowell tomorrow, a committee appointed by Sidney Hillman of the National Recovery Board, will begin an investigation of the shoe industry in that city in an attempt to find some solution which would keep shoe manufacturers from moving and at the same time satisfy union labor

The task is admittedly almost hopeless, inasmuch as the present code penalizes manufacturers operating in cities by insisting on a higher wage than can be paid in rural communities.

During the past year, at least 20 shoe manufacturers in Lowell Lynn Haverhill, Marlboro, Salem and Brockton have moved to other states

SEE LITTLE HOPE

Two firms quit Lowell last week and a third is preparing to move to Maine. The three firms employed about 800 workers.

In Lowell, at the present time there are only about 800 out of 3500 shoe workers employed .

Union leaders see no hope for the bulk of the workers, even if the NRA board is able to adjust present difficulties between manufacturers and labor

Only the introduction of new manufacturers to the city can help, union leaders say, and until a nation-wide minimum wage scale is adopted, manufacturers will locate in rural communities where a lower wage means a higher profit.

Gov. Ely

L. E. Kirstein

GOVERNOR ELY also stops by. On his back from Atlanta And the conference of Southern governors

ELY WILL OPEN a law office in Boston. With Robert E. Bradford and other associates. Before retiring from the State House, he will make one important speech Reviewing the record of his four years as governor.

JOSEPH F STOKES of Cambridge has been consulting with Federal Housing Administration. Studying their housing plans. And advancing theories on real estate. Maybe he would be named chief appraiser by them for Bay State If he so desired.

* * *

COL. JOHN J. CUMMINGS of Boston conferring with the AAA Showing "farm experts" some new ideas. On how to accommodate wheat surpluses. They think so highly of his brochure at AAA that they call it the "Cummings' Plan."

NEW ENGLAND public utilities much distressed. By President Roosevelt's interest in Muscle Shoals. And his determination to develop the St. Lawrence. Which would put more government electrical energy into competition with private plants.

GRIFFIN FALLON highly considered. For New England manager of the Securities Exchange Commission headquarters. To be established at Boston.

JUDSON KING estimates that the electric users of the country could be saved $500,000,000 per year. And the companies make a profit for themselves. By lowering the rates. Boston knew him as an advocate of the Initiative and Referendum. When that matter was the subject of a battle there

* * *

BUSINESS and the administration are pretty close together, now. The President will avoid an extravagant program of public works, if possible. He will avoid tax increases, if possible. He will send some of the public relief problem back to the states. With the idea that they will protect the dollars better than the national government could do.

A NEW GOLD RUSH

A NEW GOLD RUSH is sweeping the country, not in Canyons or Gulches, but in old Bureau Drawers.

When President Roosevelt, with a stroke of his pen, increased the price of gold, it started millions of people searching in odd corners, old bureaus, chests and closets for gold, old gold (that is bits of out of date jewelry, dental gold and old watches). Today these are worth more than they have been for two generations.

took as many of them on [illegible] could. They should be [illegible]

Kathleen smiled [illegible] A dimple showed [illegible] of her [illegible] "I [illegible] think Mr Brentwood [illegible] great fun. [illegible] not [illegible] to be [illegible] to work under me."

Mr Daniel's [illegible] brows shot up. "W[illegible]"

"[illegible] I'm [illegible] Apparently in the advertising department at [illegible] were no women."

"No wonder they went under," Mr Daniel snorted. "Only a woman knows how to appeal to other women, and [illegible] women [illegible] of [illegible] of any large store, it's essential to have a woman in control of the advertising. That's my opinion anyhow. I hope Brentwood makes good. His father was an old friend of mine. But don't forget you're the boss. Don't stand any nonsense from him."

A secret smile flitted momentarily over Kathleen's pretty face.

"I've no intention of doing so, Mr. Daniel," she said.

CHAPTER II.

Derek Again

WHEN Kathleen returned from lunch Clive Brentwood's advertising copy lay on her desk. She [illegible]led. Invariably he contrived to p[illegible] his copy on her desk when he knew she would be out. She could only conclude he wished to avoid an interview.

Her sense of humor was tickled, but her woman's vanity was piqued. However practical and level headed you are, you can't completely crush your personal vanity.

Kathleen sat down at her desk and glanced at the copy.

Webbers for Lawn Mowers.
The Best Value in the City

Well and Efficiently and to Last for Years

"Oh Gosh," sighed Kathleen.

But, it must be confessed, the gleam in her eyes was more satisfaction than annoyance. She hesitated a moment, then put on a pair of tortoiseshell glasses.

She didn't need glasses; she could see perfectly well without them; but she felt they helped to give her a sense of superiority, especially over the male sex.

She touched the bell on her desk and asked the typist who answered it to send Mr. Brentwood in to her. He came immediately, though not, it must be confessed, with too good a grace. He was a tall, slightly sardonic looking young man with slightly wavy, brown hair, a keen, intelligent face and dark brown eyes.

"Sit down, please, Mr Brentwood," Kathleen said.

Clive Brentwood smiled slightly. "You are not, I hope, going to give me the sack?"

Kathleen looked up at him with a start. "Why should you think that?"

"You invited me to sit down. With one's boss that's usually a preliminary to something unpleasant."

Kathleen regarded him sternly. "It's about this advertising copy," she said.

"What's wrong with it?" he asked sharply.

It was scarcely the tone he should have adopted towards his superior, but Clive could never reconcile himself to the fact that Kathleen, slight and pretty, and actually a year younger than he was, was his superior. He wasn't averse to women. At least he wasn't averse to women outside business offices. He liked to take a girl to a show, or to dance with her. But, most certainly, he did not like to have his work criticized by her or to take orders from her.

"Everything," Kathleen said. "It is . . ." she sought the mildest disparagement of the many forming in her mind, "not very arresting."

"How can one be arresting about a lawn mower?" Clive wanted to know.

"It's your job to be," she told him sternly. "Neither has it," she paused, "that note of human interest I've asked you repeatedly to get into your copy."

"Do you expect me to sob all over the page on the subject of lawn mowers?" he asked bluntly.

This time he scarcely attempted to hide the note of antagonism in his voice.

"I expect you to do what I ask you to do while you are working in my department, Mr. Brentwood," she returned sharply.

A slight flush rose to his forehead. "I'm sorry," he muttered.

There was a brief and awkward pause.

Kathleen frowned and made a few notes with her pencil on a blank sheet of paper.

"I want something more like this," she said. She pushed the paper across to him; he read:

"You have your home. You have your garden. You have Saturday afternoon free, but have you a lawn mower? Don't borrow your neighbor's. He doesn't like it. Buy your own. You'll get pleasure from it and results. Etc., etc."

"If I wrote anything like that I should never dare face myself in the mirror again," Clive remarked with some heat.

"But you're not paid to look at your [illegible] in the mirror," Kathleen pointed out [illegible]. "Please take the copy back, Mr Brentwood, and rewrite it along the lines I have suggested."

He rose to his feet. His face was flushed with anger. Kathleen [illegible] his antagonism more strongly than ever.

He [illegible] but he [illegible] by [illegible] to make [illegible] on her pad.

"You are not, I gather, an emotional man, Mr Brentwood?" she [illegible].

He swung toward her [illegible] though he [illegible].

"What's that?" he demanded.

The gleam in Kathleen's eyes grew.

"If you were you would find it easier to write the kind of copy I require. Let me stress the fact that I want human appeal. I want you to [illegible] on people's emotions. [illegible] I want you to write from your heart and not from your brain, Mr Brentwood."

"That," Clive remarked heatedly, "[illegible] for you to suggest [illegible] for me to carry out." And [illegible] his tone was not what it should have been toward his superior.

But this time it more amused than annoyed Kathleen.

"I don't see why it shouldn't. You don't look as though you [illegible] suffering from any odd complexes, Mr Brentwood," Kathleen remarked quietly. "Forgive my asking, but I do so purely in the interests of business, have you ever been in love?"

He glared down at her for a moment incredulously. "I have not," he snapped back. "And I fail to see what that has to do with selling lawn mowers."

"Quite a lot," she replied coolly, "but we won't go into that now. In the meantime, if you have the opportunity to fall in love, let me advise you to take it."

"Thanks," he flung at her.

He looked as though he would like to have said more, quite a lot more but, instead, he picked up the copy and marched out of the room.

Kathleen regarded his departing back with a quiet little smile. Also she felt a little guilty. She had frankly to confess she rather enjoyed baiting Clive Brentwood. Chiefly because he made little effort to conceal his disapproval of her.

It was a little comic, she thought, her advising him to fall in love, when it was the last thing she had any intention of doing herself.

Unwillingly, almost, her eyes strayed towards that name on her engagement pad. Derek Carlton. Would he be the same? Seven years since she had last seen him. Seven years in which so much had happened.

In those seven years she had climbed [illegible] to the top of her [illegible]. And yet [illegible] though [illegible] had happened. [illegible] night he had held her in his arms and she had sobbed her heart out.

Nothing [illegible] when he had [illegible] [illegible] for the future [illegible] and [illegible] that responded to his [illegible].

But [illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible]

"[illegible] tell you. I've been putting off telling you for a week, but I'm sailing for England in a few days."

She shook herself [illegible]. She hadn't allowed herself to think of that scene for years. It was humiliating. Her pride hadn't helped her. Pride [illegible] a sorry thing to [illegible] upon [illegible] moments. She had broken down completely. He had held the slim, weeping girl in his arms [illegible] her. His thick blunt fingers, as gentle as a woman's, [illegible] and smoothed her rich [illegible] hair.

"Poor little kid," he had [illegible]. "I didn't mean you to [illegible]. Blame it all, why [illegible] hurt you? I [illegible] I didn't know you took it any more seriously than I did."

But of course he had known. A man can't help knowing. Yet, because he had made no definite promise, he exonerated himself. And, since to be a good sport was essentially Kathleen's nature, she exonerated him too. But that hadn't helped her heartache. She had carried a heartache around with her for many months.

Work, intensive work [illegible] loved it, later cured [illegible].

"I'm a completely different girl from what I was then," she thought confidently. "That episode might have happened in a past life. My only interest in meeting him again is frank curiosity."

Later that afternoon her sister, Mamie, telephoned from Stamford. "I was wondering," she began hesitantly, "[illegible] that bill for Dickie's operation. Could you, Kathleen [illegible]" she went on in a rush, "I mean, just as a loan. The lawyers have written me a [illegible] letter and . . ."

"That's quite all right, Mamie," Kathleen said, "how much is it?"

"Thirty dollars and [illegible] there's also that bill for Margaret's [illegible]. Of course [illegible] doesn't [illegible] But [illegible]"

[illegible] much [illegible] had been asked.

"Fifteen dollars," [illegible] Mamie. "And of course, [illegible] daughter."

"How [illegible] getting on [illegible]" Kathleen [illegible].

"Swell," Mamie [illegible]. "I [illegible] working [illegible] but [illegible] him [illegible]"

"If he [illegible] a little [illegible] would [illegible] a little further [illegible] Kathleen [illegible]"

Mamie laughed [illegible]. "You know what [illegible] Just [illegible]"

"So [illegible] that he [illegible] forever [illegible]" Kathleen thought privately. [illegible]

Marriage, what [illegible] she thought after Mamie had rung off. What high hopes you went into it with, hopes that dwindled [illegible] Mamie [illegible] radiant bride [illegible] happy. Mamie now [illegible] three children, little better [illegible] household drudge [illegible].

A queer smile twisted her lips. She had probably a great deal to be grateful to Derek Carlton for.

He came on the stroke of five thirty. And she knew, when she heard his voice in the outer office speaking to her typist, he was the same.

"How [illegible]," she thought, and refused to admit the sudden unexpected [illegible] of her heart, the [illegible] that came over her, the trembling of her hands as she hastily removed the disfiguring glasses.

"Miss Manner?" he said and [illegible] in the doorway, slow recognition beginning to come alive in his eyes.

"Yes, it's me," she said, and [illegible] that very sweet smile that [illegible] oddly with her business-like manner.

"[illegible] this is great!" He came eagerly toward her [illegible] hand outstretched. "After all [illegible] years."

"Seven of them." But [illegible] across the broad mahogany desk, the [illegible] years [illegible] to [illegible]. The Kathleen of twenty [illegible] pretty [illegible] Derek Carlton [illegible] crop of [illegible] hair, grey eyes [illegible] penetrating, a slight wiry body that [illegible] energy [illegible] were [illegible] grey trousers spotted, his check coat threadbare at the elbows.

The illusion was only momentary.

WELL, YOU CAN HAVE ALL YOU WANT OF IT, PAUL--- EVEN BETWEEN MEALS, TOO, BECAUSE IT'S GOOD FOR YOU
PSST! WHAT'S COME OVER PAUL ALL OF A SUDDEN? HE'S ACTUALLY EATING, FOR A CHANGE!
AND WILL YOU LOOK AT THE WAY HE'S GOING AFTER THOSE CARROTS AND PEAS---I CAN HARDLY BELIEVE MY EYES!
SOME WEEKS LATER
JUST LOOK AT THAT, ELSIE! HE'S GAINED 8 POUNDS ALREADY AND HE'S AS SOLID AS A ROCK---JUST FEEL!
ISN'T IT AMAZING! IT JUST DOESN'T SEEM POSSIBLE HE COULD FILL OUT SO MUCH IN SUCH A SHORT TIME. BUT HE HAS--THANKS TO OVALTINE!

Mothers! Here's How Ovaltine Helps Fussy Eaters Eat!

WHEN a child "won't eat" there are two important things you can do to help. First, give him food that is very easy to digest. Second, give him food that is rich in appetite-producing Vitamin B.

It is for these, amongst other virtues, that Ovaltine is gaining world recognition as an important food for child building. For Ovaltine is not only rich in Vitamin B—but is processed so that it digests very quickly—even at times when digestion is impaired.

These features are tremendously important. For specialists will tell you that a poor eater is usually a child with poor or slow digestion. The stomach doesn't empty soon enough to produce the feeling of hunger for the next meal. That's why he shuns his regular food, such as vegetables and milk.

But once appetite is stimulated in a scientific way—the old objection to every-day foods gradually disappears. Very frequently he even relishes vegetables and other foods to which he formerly objected . . . and weight is often added at the rate of a pound a week or more.

For the sake of your child, try Ovaltine. You can get Ovaltine at any drug or grocery store—and results may surprise you. Or, if you like, send the coupon for a trial supply.

NOTE. Thousands of people, men and women, are using Ovaltine to restore vitality when fatigued. It is also highly recommended by physicians as a strengthening food for nursing mothers, convalescents, and the aged. When taken as a hot drink at bedtime, it usually induces sound sleep quickly.

CHAPTER XI.

Henrietta Vanishes

RESTLESSLY Blair waited for dawn to break over his camp.

What came [illegible] his old eyes [illegible] posing as if [illegible] his formal [illegible] there [illegible] of foreboding. He nervously avoided Blair's gaze and turned his back on Gaglajung. He sat on a camp-stool in the delicious cool light of early morning and watched Blair but pretended not to, croakily criticizing the camp servants.

"By heaven, when I went [illegible]ering we cleaned camp at cock-crow. By daybreak, if there was dung left in the horse lines, someone heard about it."

Other than the customary politeness about Blair's health, he asked no questions. His eyes did not rest for more than a moment on the tent where Taron Ling lay, but he sat where he could [illegible] a movement of the tent flap without turning his head. The Indian night that has a hundred thousand eyes had evidently kept him well informed. He awaited [illegible].

Thirty minutes after daybreak his young grandson arrived, on a lean pony from the [illegible] of the ford, dismounted and squatted at the old man's feet. [illegible]ant led the pony away. The boy said nothing, but the old Rangar [illegible] although he, too, made no remark.

Grayne came a few minutes after that, cantering. His horse's legs and belly were wet from splashing through the ford, but he reined in as if in no hurry at all, when he drew near the camp. He looked peculiarly unofficial in polo helmet, shirt and riding-breeches. He wore smoked spectacles, but removed them before shaking hands, which he did rather diffidently, as if not quite sure it was expected of him. He merely nodded to the Rangar, who stood up and bowed.

Blair received him with the smile of old acquaintance: "Having a good time? Enjoying your leave?"

"So, so. Making the best of it. Couldn't afford England. Bought too many expensive books the last [illegible] or so."

That looked probable. He had

One of Grayne's Specials Saw Henrietta Being Led by a Local Priest Into a Shrine That Only Brahmins Were Supposed to Enter.

the eyes of a bookish man—searchers of others' opinions—friendly, sympathetic, intelligent, not dynamic, perhaps lazy in some ways.

"Shooting?" Blair asked as they sat down together.

"Not much. Reading and writing mostly. Hear you shot a tiger last night."

"Yes. How's Henrietta Frensham?"

"Apropos of tigers? I don't [illegible] mad be, but she [illegible] My [illegible] ght her [illegible] It [illegible] was lying without a [illegible] My wife was [illegible] to watch the [illegible] order [illegible] of the forest [illegible] tea in pajamas outside. My wife usually joins Henrietta sometimes [illegible] I want to [illegible] what you [illegible]"

"Funny time to want to talk [illegible]" Blair [illegible].

"Better time than any other. [illegible] times actually talks at [illegible], instead of listening [illegible]ng. Doris and I [illegible] pected her silence, of [illegible]. It's comprehensible. She [illegible] is much worse about [illegible] appearance than [illegible] to reveal to anyone—[illegible]n her friends. I've let her do pretty much as she pleases."

"So I hear," Blair answered. [illegible] k?"

Grayne looked vaguely uncomfortable. He did his best to look judicious—leaned back, lighted a cigar, pursing his lips on the [illegible].

"[illegible] though un[illegible]. To put it mildly, he's [illegible]ntional. But I'd trust her anywhere, in nearly any circumstances." He blew smoke through [illegible]. "I don't believe there's [illegible] who'd harm her. But she overdoes it. I mean, for instance, where the [illegible] she now? Home in the [illegible] off again before daybreak without a word to anyone—tigers, you know—snakes,—besides, who'd bet there aren't dacoits in the hills? There probably aren't, but there might be. Doris and I don't mind her missing meals or anything like that, but—well, I ask you."

Blair waited. He was not there to be asked, but to find out. Grayne continued:

"Between you and me, I object to her going where I myself couldn't go without a special warrant and probably couldn't get that. To give you an idea of what I mean—when I put in for long leave and told 'em I meant to spend it here, I was cautioned—just as if I'd been a probationer fresh from home—on no account to poke my nose into places re[illegible]cred. They knew I'm interested in that kind of thing and they ticked me off like a recruit. I haven't even been up on Gaglajung. You know the legend? I'd intended to look for the secret passage that the three kings forced Ranjeet Singh to betray. Of course I couldn't in the circumstances. However, I've reason to believe that Henrietta goes into all sorts of places, Gaglajung included. Crypts. Caverns. Heaven knows where she goes."

"Yo[illegible] you've reason to believe [illegible]"

"Good reason. One of my specials saw her, week before last, being led by a local priest into a place at the back of a shrine near here that only Brahmins are supposed to enter. What does that mean?"

"What do you think it means?"

"Well, I'd say she's quite likely looking for her father. You know, there's a vague report of his having been seen hereabouts. I don't believe it, but perhaps she does. She seems to be on good terms with the local priests and peasantry. That's all very well of course; but you know, I'd be in a [illegible] it would [illegible] mean [illegible]—Have you any in[illegible]"

Bla[illegible]

"Did you examine her tent?"

"No."

"Why not?"

"It didn't occur to me. Why [illegible]"

[illegible]

"No."

"Would your wife know [illegible] there [illegible]"

[illegible] wind up. He was [illegible] a sense of dread on [illegible] account, so he contrived to look rather cheerful.

"Don't look at me," he said. "Look at that kite over there on the dead [illegible]ing about that. Go back along your [illegible] Henrietta's tent. Take care that your servants don't see what you're doing. Write me a full report at once; I'll endorse and forward it to the proper quarter."

"Great day, man, do you think—"

"[illegible]"

"I mean——"

"Yes, I know what you mean. She had a servant, I suppose? Where is he?"

"In camp. It was he who first suggested that she might have returned here to talk to you, since she was here last night. Do you mean you think——"

"Did he see her leave camp?"

"No. He was asleep under the fly of her tent when your men brought her home. I suppose they told him where she'd been. She told him he was not needed, so he went off to sleep in the servants' quarters. Their tents are about fifty yards from ours. He had no notion she was gone again until I sent for him."

"Has Henrietta said anything to you about her father?"

"We've discussed him, of course. The impression I got was, that it hurt her to talk about him. Doris rather put the hat on that topic of conversation, she called me a tactless brute. Henrietta isn't what I'd call garrulous at any time; the only pointer I remember her giving was when she said, a few days ago, that her father might have been a lieutenant-general by now if he weren't such a student of Indian magic. But when I questioned her about that she shut up."

"What was your line of interrogation?"

"Stupid, I daresay. I asked if she thought it possible that Frensham might have fallen foul of some of those sorcerers who [illegible] to keep their tricks [illegible] secret. They might have killed him for discovering a trick. She said Frensham had never been interested in faked miracles. Then she shut right up. You know her better than I do. You know how she shuts up."

"Why do you call that a pointer?"

"Perhaps it isn't. But it's full moon tomorrow night. It makes some women restless you know. It makes her restless. I don't know whether she's superstitious about it or not. But she has it marked on the calendar, and she told us not to [illegible]

[illegible] Search it thoroughly, and [illegible] me a written report. [illegible] tongue?"

"Certainly."

[illegible]

"You say he w[illegible]self. In what way do you mean that?"

"Hah! He used to override the Brahmins. He respected them not at all. It is a pity there are none nowadays who have that but kind to the hair

Hair thrives on this sort of treatment—it's just as important, in fact, to the health of the hair as exercise is to the body. If you would overcome dandruff, dryness, falling hair, stimulate your scalp to activity the 'Vaseline' Hair Tonic way. Before your weekly shampoo apply the Tonic liberally to the scalp and massage with a rotary motion until the whole head tingles. These Tonic treatments waken inactive oil ducts, free loose dust and dandruff particles, and prepare the scalp for a thorough cleansing. A few drops of the Tonic applied to the hair before combing each morning will keep unruly hair in place, and give a well-groomed appearance. Your druggist sells 'Vaseline' Hair Tonic. Barbers everywhere recommend and use it. Two sizes of shaker-top bottles.

Heart Appeal

By Jennifer Ames

Derek Carlton today was faultlessly dressed, his black hair was brushed tidily back, it shone as though it were kept in place by some hair lotion. His body had filled out, though he was still fairly slender, and a network of tiny crinkles had begun to appear under his eyes. But there was still about him that suggestion of restless energy, of dynamic force only more pronounced now, and to these were added a self-confidence that had been lacking before.

"You have changed," he said.

She smiled. "And you have succeeded."

He smiled too, the boyish smile she remembered so well. "You seem to have succeeded also."

She didn't deny it. "Won't you sit down."

He sat before her desk. And, suddenly, it seemed to her so odd that he should be sitting facing her in her office like this, after that last scene seven years ago, she almost laughed aloud.

"Mr. Daniel was telling me about the great success you've had with your magazine 'Man About Town.' It must be grand to feel you've put something across in such a big way."

"It is," he agreed. He added, a slight hesitation in his voice, "Do you know, when the first number appeared, I almost thought of sending you a copy? I would have, had I known your address."

"Then you did remember me?"

His gray eyes met hers momentarily across the mahogany desk.

"I try," he told her quietly, "to remember all pleasant experiences."

She nodded slowly. So that was how he regarded it, a pleasant experience. That was how she, too, would regard it. And it had been pleasant. If there had been heartache with it, that was all over and done with. Years ago.

"I should like to have had the copy," she told him. "I remember you often said you wanted to start a magazine of your own. What gave you the idea?"

"I got it while I was working on an English newspaper," he said. "I sketched out a rough plan of it while I was over there. I came home with the intention of getting someone to back it. Everyone prophesied," his eyes twinkled, "it would last exactly a month."

"What did you do?"

"I put all the capital I had into it," he grimaced, "which wasn't much. I was my own stenographer, typist, business manager, advertising man, contributor, editor..."

"Stop," Kathleen commanded, laughing. "You make me dizzy."

"The main thing is I pulled it off. Beyond my wildest dreams." He smiled disarmingly. "Forgive me if I boast. I haven't quite got used to it yet."

"I don't blame you," Kathleen replied. "It must have been mighty thrilling right from the beginning."

He nodded. "It was." And they both fell silent.

Kathleen was thinking, "I wish I'd been in on it. I wish I'd been there to help him build it up. I've done a lot, but nothing to what he's done. I—I feel cheated somehow, being left out of it."

Yet she had had so small a part in his life, could have such a very small part in it. It was ridiculous even to wish...

"Now I hear you're starting a new magazine, 'Woman About Town,'" she remarked. "And you want to interest us in advertising?"

They discussed the matter for the next fifteen minutes; the layout of the proposed magazine, its possible sale, the public it would reach.

"I've a dummy copy in the office," he remarked. "I could [illegible] The [illegible] knock out. I [illegible]," he smiled directly across at her, "you could lunch with me tomorrow?"

"Yes, I'd be glad to," Kathleen heard herself say. "I don't think I have any appointments for lunch tomorrow."

She glanced rather guiltily towards her engagement pad, all too conscious that: "Friday, Sept. 13, 1:15 lunch with Margarite Shute" was scribbled on it. Still Margarite would understand when she pointed out that this was business.

Business... Gray eyes, so keen and alive, with that new network of crinkles under them; lips, that occurring almost weekly, sent to New York for aid. Lieutenant Michael McNamara and Detective Thomas Fitzgerald, of the New York police headquarters staff [illegible] And it was [illegible] who eventually ended my husband's [illegible] career and uncovered the master mind that was stealing the jewels.

It was in the course of events at Miami that Sitamore happened to meet a young golf professional named Charles Yacht, who was employed at one of the Miami [illegible]. Yacht [illegible] to my [illegible] and [illegible] from [illegible] brother Jack Yacht who [illegible] in Sing Sing [illegible] in connection with [illegible] $200,000 Wall Street bond [illegible] Yacht [illegible] of my husband [illegible] prisoner. He wanted Harry to help him [illegible] funds to employ a lawyer.

Harry told the golfer he would see what he could do, and in the course of the conversation Yacht, a handsome young fellow, about twenty-five years old, told my husband that his work brought him in contact with many wealthy men and women. That evening, he had learned, Sophia Glemby, a relative of the Glembys whose jewels were stolen by Anthony Indelicato, was going to the dog races. I told of that robbery in another chapter. Yacht revealed that the girl's grandmother, Mrs. Bertha Keller probably wouldn't go to the races with her.

Harry suggested that the theft of Mrs. Keller's jewels—the elderly woman was known to own a number of gems—might [illegible] the problem of Jack Yacht's [illegible] fund.

"Tell me when the women are out of their [illegible] and I will 'snatch' the [illegible] and give you 20 per cent [illegible] for them," Harry [illegible].

Yacht agreed to the scheme.

That night [illegible] Glemby went to the dog races. Mrs. Keller, I believe, went to the fights with a son instead of to the races, but Yacht informed my husband of the change in plans. It made little difference to Harry where the women went, just so they were out of their rooms at the hotel.

My husband had little difficulty in entering the [illegible] but once inside [illegible] had [illegible] trouble locating the jewels. After a search of the place he became convinced that they must be in a locked [illegible] which he had located in a clothes [illegible]. He forced the lock on the [illegible] and found a heavy metal case inside. It, too, was locked but locks never meant much to Harry Sitamore. He had it open within a few minutes. There was nearly $50,000 worth of jewels in the metal case.

Harry brought them home and placed them with the rest he had [illegible] but had not yet disposed of. That collection was the $500,000 worth of jewels he turned over to the police when he was [illegible].

But on the night of the [illegible] [illegible] premonition of the disaster that was hovering over him.

Mrs. K[illegible] discovered the theft of her jewels when she [illegible] home from the fights. She [illegible] it to the police and the two New York detectives, along with [illegible] Miami men, were assigned to the case. One of the first questions that McNamara and Fitzgerald asked members of the family the following day, during their investigation of the robbery, was where they had been at the time the jewels were stolen, and whom they had been with.

Sophia Glemby revealed that she had been at the dog races, and had seen Yacht there. The young golf professional had no criminal record, and that information would have done the police no good if it hadn't been for the trained memory of McNamara.

The lieutenant recalled that a man named Yacht had been arrested in connection with the New York bond robbery and sentenced to prison. The name was unusual, and the detective decided to question the golfer. Yacht, of course, denied all knowledge of the robbery. He made a mistake, however, when he denied that he had any criminal connections.

One of the detectives asked him suddenly: "How about your brother Jack?"

It was a shot in the dark. The officers didn't know for sure that the golfer was the convict's brother. But Yacht paled and [illegible]

[illegible] their relentless questioning. "You are getting in deep water, Yacht," they told him. "It is about time you started to tell the truth. [illegible] for a long [illegible]."

[illegible] He [illegible] the whole plot and told the detectives where they could find my husband.

A few minutes later the police arrived at our house. The game was up. The law had finally caught up with Harry Sitamore, [illegible]

[illegible], the Mayor of M[illegible] He [illegible] Harry by sight and had been introduced to him at several parties. I think the Mayor was more embarrassed about the arrest than Harry was. He couldn't seem to realize that Harry Sitamore, whom he knew as Roths- [illegible]

When he was taken into court my husband pleaded guilty to [illegible] robbery that had [illegible] my husband to twenty years' imprisonment on each count. Two of each of the sentences were to run concurrently which meant that Harry was condemned to forty years of hard labor on a Florida chain gang.

Harry [illegible] thirty-seven now. In forty years [illegible] that long [illegible] be seventy [illegible] working in the hot [illegible] of tropical swamps [illegible] are not likely to live forty years at their tasks.

It was [illegible] that my husband received. His career as [illegible] is ended. The [illegible] millions of dollars worth of jewels [illegible]. The fortunes he made as a jewel thief have been swept away. There is nothing left but memories. Memories of other days. Memories of underworld friends who, now that Harry has been trapped by the law, have forgotten the days when they were friends. Memories of ten years spent traveling through the country, living in the finest hotels, associating with many wealthy and fashionable people. Ten years the like of which we will never know again.

Harry Sitamore isn't a name any more, but just a number. The cleverest jewel thief in the world wasn't clever enough to dodge the law forever. On the chain gang, working with him, are killers and petty thieves, [illegible] white and black, [illegible] who never knew what honesty meant, and honest men who slipped perhaps only once into the life of crime, and are paying dearly for their transgressions now.

They are the men, these hot, tired, sweating men of a Florida chain gang, who have learned the lesson that the criminal always [illegible] sooner or later. In other chain gangs and jails and penitentiaries throughout the country there are other men, duplications of the futile little band that compose that Florida chain gang, who have learned that same lesson.

Crime doesn't pay—even if, like Harry Sitamore, you are the cleverest thief in the world. Crooks get by, for a while. "Easy Money" seems terribly easy, for a while. But some day the law catches up.

Crime doesn't pay—you can't win!

Dr. Scholl's ONIXOL

"Doctors asked for more and more of it — when they found how quickly this new yeast acted"

states DR. R. E. LEE
(Director of Fleischmann Health Research)

Dr. Lee says, "It's a new, stronger 'strain' of yeast discovered by a noted American medical scientist connected with a leading university."

Makes digestive juices flow faster, "inside" muscles work harder

"XR" Yeast works faster than any former yeast because it contains hormone-like substances ("activators") which speed digestive juices and muscles amazingly.

It's not surprising that this new yeast has given such quick, sure benefits in 25 clinics which tested it on hundreds of patients. "A wonderful discovery!" comment the doctors.

Constipation, Poor Digestion, and related Skin Disorders and Lack of Energy corrected twice as fast. (New Vitamin "A" combats colds!)

SO MUCH QUICKER ACTING that doctors who tested it asked for more and more . . . even before it was offered for sale! If you haven't heard all about "XR" Yeast, read these questions:—

Why does this new "XR" Yeast act so much quicker?

Because it's a much stronger "strain" or variety of yeast. As it works more vigorously in the body, it benefits you faster!

How does it benefit you?

Most cases of constipation, indigestion and associated ailments come from a slowing of digestive juices and muscles. "XR" Yeast contains substances (like "hormones") which speed these juices and muscles astonishingly.

Then . . . Constipation and Indigestion stop sooner than before?

Much sooner! As your digestive juices flow fast, and muscles work harder inside you, your food is better "churned"—digested . . . passes through and out of you quicker. You lose that "stuffed" feeling—bloating—indigestion—after meals. Constipation usually disappears very quickly, too.

"XR" Yeast actually "normalizes" you. Unlike harsh cathartics!

Does it clear the Skin Faster?

Nearly always! As Fleischmann's "XR" Yeast checks bowel poisons, your blood absorbs pure nourishment, feeds it to your skin. Your skin gains "tone," resistance—becomes much healthier and fresher looking. Eruptions such as pimples and boils usually clear up in much shorter time!

Are Headaches and "Run-down" Condition corrected Quicker?

Yes. Headaches, doctors know, are oftenest caused by poisons in the blood, or pressure on abdominal nerves from unexpelled wastes. This great cause of headaches is relieved by "XR" Yeast quite promptly.

You gain energy and appetite, too—as "XR" Yeast cleanses you and helps you get more "good" from your food. People over 40 need Fleischmann's "XR" Yeast to offset the slowing of digestive secretions occurring especially after that age . . . to keep feeling and looking younger.

"I wouldn't have believed yeast could work so fast," writes Mrs. Elizabeth Bro, Westfield, N. J. "I'd been eating irregular meals—often felt terribly tired—had bad headaches. Then my skin broke out! . . . 'XR' Yeast ended my sluggishness. The pimples left!—also the headaches and tiredness. It's amazingly fast."

Are Colds less frequent?

Yes! "XR" Yeast not only strengthens your resistance to colds by purifying your system, but by supplying the newly added Vitamin A or "anti-infective" vitamin. And this food also gives you Vitamins B, D and G—so vital to health. Four vitamins!

DON'T NEGLECT TO GET a supply of Fleischmann's "XR" Yeast today or tomorrow—then eat 3 cakes daily—plain, or dissolved in one-third glass of water—preferably half an hour before meals. If you're taking cathartics, discontinue them gradually. Keep on with "XR" Yeast after you've noted quick results—until you feel 100% well! Start now.

(As good as ever for baking!)

A Variety of Novelties Which Will Improve Your Home

RECENTLY a distinguished woman writer brought out a book based on a novel idea, says the director of Applecroft Experiment Station. In this little volume she develops the theme that every House is a Personality, and that it is quite living and human. For, as the authoress asks, does not a house have eyes—the windows? And lungs—its ventilating system? Does it not have ears—the telephones? Does it not have even a heart—as evidenced by the repetitive hum of the many motors and machinery in its installation?

The writer follows through the original idea, advocating by strong pleas the improvements in house building which may make homes more in keeping with modern needs. She wishes that houses were flexible, and so built as to allow the inmates to lead the [illegible] and happiest of [illegible]. And it is true, that countless hundreds of our houses are [illegible] [illegible] their windows are too many, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] or their [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] "breathe" [illegible] [illegible] or the [illegible] are wrongly placed and [illegible] comfort [illegible] [illegible] capped. At [illegible] [illegible] gorgeous [illegible]—this comparison of our homes to our own personal organism.

And so a group of [illegible] appliances [illegible] been selected which might be called aid to making the house have a fuller personality of the present [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] of the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] more [illegible]

[illegible] On the contrary, [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] —with [illegible] [illegible] the working [illegible] into [illegible] warmth [illegible] of the house, is quite common. PUMPKIN CHIFFON PIE

(One 9 inch pie—uses only ¼ package)

1 envelope Knox Sparkling Gelatine
¼ cup cold water 1¼ cups canned pumpkin ½ cup milk
½ teaspoonful ginger ½ teaspoonful nutmeg
½ teaspoonful cinnamon ½ teaspoonful salt 1 cup sugar 3 eggs

To slightly beaten egg yolks add one-half cup sugar, pumpkin, milk, salt and spices. Cook until thick in double boiler. Pour cold water in bowl and sprinkle gelatine on top of water. Add to hot pumpkin mixture, mix thoroughly and cool. When it begins to thicken, add remaining sugar and fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into previously baked pie shell. Chill in refrigerator or cold place. Pie may be garnished with whipped cream just before serving. This is delicious served in a gingersnap crust made as follows

GINGERSNAP PIE CRUST

1½ CUPS GINGERSNAP CRUMBS
¼ cup powdered sugar ½ cup butter, scant

Crush gingersnaps [illegible] mix with butter and sugar. Pat mixture firmly into pie plate. Place pie pan in refrigerator or cold place. Allow to stand for several minutes, then fill with the above pie filling and chill

KNOX DAINTIES

[illegible] envelopes Knox Sparkling Gelatine
[illegible] cups sugar ¼ teaspoonful salt
1½ cups [illegible] ½ teaspoonful peppermint extract
[illegible] cinnamon extract
Red and Green Coloring (Liquid or Paste)

Heat [illegible] boiling point. Pour cold water in bowl [illegible] of water. Add to hot syrup and stir [illegible] SLOWLY for [illegible] minutes. Remove from fire and [illegible] one part a delicate red and flavor [illegible] other part a delicate green and [illegible] extract. Rinse two pans (size about 8 x 4 inches) [illegible] candy mixture to the depth of about three [illegible] place (not a refrigerator), allow [illegible] at least twelve hours. With a wet sharp knife [illegible] turn out on board lightly covered with [illegible]. Cut into cubes and roll in powdered or fine granulated sugar.

NOTE: If [illegible] add three tablespoonfuls lemon juice and [illegible] extract to one part of the candy and leave it uncolored. Any preferred flavoring or coloring may be used. This candy may be [illegible] drops of oil of cinnamon or cloves instead of the extract. This must be stirred into the mixture thoroughly while it is hot.

It may also be made by using 1 teaspoonful ground cinnamon or cloves instead of the extract. In this case the ground spice is boiled with the sugar and water. The candy, however, is not as attractive as when made with extracts or oils.

Makes about 20[illegible] pieces, weighs about 2½ lbs. and costs about 34c.

JOE'S
DAGWOOD, FROM WHERE ARE YOU PHONING?
OH, ER.. UH.. I'M PHONING FROM A.. UH.. ER.. GROCERY STORE!
IT'S FUNNY, BUT THE NOISES THAT CAME THRU THE RECEIVER DIDN'T SOUND LIKE ANY GROCERY STORE I'VE EVER BEEN IN!
OPERATOR TRACE THAT CALL FOR ME, PLEASE!
HELLO... YOUR PARTY 'PHONED FROM JOE'S TAVERN ON TENTH STREET!
AHA!
HURRY UP, I'M STARVED!
THAT'LL BE FORTY CENTS!
SAY, YOU MIGHT AS WELL PUT A QUART OF ALCOHOL IN THE RADIATOR.. IT'S GETTING COLD!
YOO-HOO... MR BUMSTEAD, HOW ABOUT A LIFT HOME?
BETTER KEEP GOING... IT'S MISS TEASLEY.. OUR WIVES DON'T LIKE HER!
WHAT CAN WE DO SHE'S A NEIGHBOR WE'LL HAVE TO GIVE HER A LIFT!
THEY STOPPED IN FRONT OF MISS TEASLEYS HOUSE, YESSIREE... SHE'S GETTING OUT OF THE CAR!
OH, SO THAT'S IT!
I CAN SMELL ALCOHOL ALREADY!
WHO WERE THOSE GUYS THAT RAN OFF AND LEFT THIS CAR STANDING IN THE MIDDLE OF THE STREET?
OUR HUSBANDS, OFFICER WE'LL TAKE THE CAR HOME!
AND WE'LL TAKE CARE OF THEM, TOO!
LET'S GO HOME AND TAKE IT! THE LONGER WE STAY HERE, THE WORSE IT'LL BE!

GREATLY AMUSED BY THE ANTICS OF GABBY, JOEY'S PET MONKEY, THE TWO CASTAWAYS SPEND BUSY HOURS GATHERING FOOD AND FORTIFYING THEIR ROCKY CAVE AGAINST THE DANGERS THAT LURK ON THE UNKNOWN ISLAND... ON A HIGH HILLTOP THEY HAVE PREPARED A SIGNAL FIRE TO BE LIGHTED IF THEY SIGHT A PASSING SHIP
HEY, GABBY... WILL YOU PLEASE STOP BRINGING ME BANANAS?! I KNOW YOU MEAN TO DO ME A FAVOR... BUT ENOUGH IS PLENTY
EEK! EEK! EEK!
GOLLY, GABBY.. DIDN'T YOU HEAR ME TELLING YOU THAT I DON'T WANT ANY MORE BANANAS?!
EEK! EEK! EEK!
LOOK, MING.. GABBY IS ALL EXCITED ABOUT SOMETHING! HE'S FORGOTTEN ALL ABOUT THE BANANAS!
IN MY ROCKLIKE OPINION THERE IS REASON FOR UNRESTRAINED REJOICING..
I CAN SEE THE MAST.. AND THAT SMOKE MUST BE FROM A SHIP..
LET OUR COMMONPLACE FEET ADVANCE RAPIDLY TO THE SIGNAL FIRE
IT IS WISELY WRITTEN. "WHEN YOUR HOUSE IS ON FIRE, MINUTES ARE MORE PRECIOUS THAN EXTREMELY LARGE PEARLS"
LOOK OUT, GABBY.. YOU'LL BURN YOUR PAW!
THIS MALIGNANT BREEZE FROM THE BREATH OF A HIGHLY MALICIOUS DEMON-
GEE! THEY DIDN'T SEE OUR SMOKE SIGNAL - THEY'RE GOING AWAY FROM THE ISLAND WHO CAN DENY- THE SHADOW MOVES AS THE SUN DIRECTS?

LONG AGO, IT WAS DISCOVERED ON THE 3 BAR RANCH THAT IF A JOB HAS TO BE DONE IT'S BETTER NOT TO ASK "DON" TO DO IT— THE YOUNG MAN STARTS OUT ALL RIGHT, BUT BEFORE HE GETS VERY FAR SOMETHING USUALLY HAPPENS TO DISTURB HIS COMPASS AND SEND HIM OFF HIS COURSE!
DON, WHILE YOU'RE RESTING I WISH YOU'D RIDE UP TO BIG CIENEGA AN' SEE IF YOU CAN LOCATE MY BAY MARE AN' HER COLT—
SURE, DAD— I'LL GO—
NOW DON'T FOOL AROUND THOSE GULLIES LOOKIN' FOR GOLD! LOOK FOR MY MARE!
OKAY, DAD— NO MINING TODAY!
BETCHA IF I LUGGED WATER FROM TH' MEADOW I COULD WASH SOME GOLD DUST OUTA THAT RAVINE — OLD JED WHEEDLE SAYS IT'S THERE!
I DON'T SEE THA MARE — I BET SHE'S STOLEN!
OBOY! THERE'S THA CABIN WHERE TIGER AN' DAD FOUND THA MOUNTAIN LION!
I'VE GOTTA HAVE A LOOK— I WONDER WHAT A LION SLEEPS IN WHEN IT LIVES IN A CABIN?
PROB'LY SLEEPS IN TH' CABIN, YOU SAP!
GEE, GOSH! WHAT'S THAT!? I NEVER HEARD THAT KIND OF A NOISE B'FORE— — — WHAT TH' — — — ??— —
AH, C'MON— — BE A LIL' PAL! NICE KITTY— GOOD LIL' KITTY!— — Y'GOTTA GROW SOME MORE IF Y'WANTA LICK ME — NOW BE A GOOD LIL' GUY AN' I'LL GET YA SOME NICE COW'S MILK SO YA WON'T BE SUCH A GROUCH!
OBOY! BETCHA I MAKE A BIG HIT AT TH' RANCH HOUSE! NOW I GOT ME A REG'LAR PET!!
QUIT YA WIGGLIN'!
HI — DAD! GIVE A LOOK AT WHAT I GOT!!!
I GOT A PET—! OWCH!!!
I SEND 'IM FOR A HORSE AN' HE COMES BACK WITH A MOUNTAIN LION!!!

So Beautiful Now!
LET ME TELL YOU HOW I FOUND BEAUTY and ROMANCE
THREE MONTHS AGO I COULD ONLY DREAM ABOUT ROMANCE....
NOBODY "EVER" TOOK ME OUT....
THEN ONE DAY I LEARNED WHY BUT WHAT COULD I DO? I HAD TRIED NO END OF WAYS TO CLEAR UP MY SKIN AND NOTHING SEEMED TO HELP
TOO BAD SUE DANIELS DOESN'T GET RID OF THOSE UGLY BLOTCHES. SHE'D BE A PEACH IF SHE'D ONLY CLEAR UP HER SKIN!
LUCKY FOR ME I HEARD ABOUT A NEW TYPE OF YEAST ON THE RADIO THAT NIGHT AND GOT SOME YEAST FOAM TABLETS HAVE ENDED UGLY SKIN BLEMISHES FOR THOUSANDS OF WOMEN!
I'M GOING TO TRY THEM!
30 DAYS LATER
BEFORE A MONTH WAS OVER MY SKIN WAS BEGINNING TO CLEAR UP BEAUTIFULLY
THOSE YEAST FOAM TABLETS ARE SIMPLY MARVELOUS!
AND NOW
AM I HAPPY NOW! A DATE EVERY NIGHT IF I WANT IT. AND I OWE IT ALL TO YEAST FOAM TABLETS!
YOU'RE STUNNING TONIGHT, SUE!
MAY I HAVE THE NEXT DANCE?

You, Too, Can Have New Beauty of Skin and Complexion

WHAT Yeast Foam Tablets did for Sue, they should do for you. A muddy, blotchy or pimply skin results from a disordered condition of your system—usually constipation or nervous fatigue. Both of these common ailments are often caused by the recently recognized shortage of vitamins B and G in the average diet. To correct this shortage, you need a food super-rich in these health-building elements.

Yeast Foam Tablets supply these precious substances in great abundance. They are pure, pasteurized yeast—and pure yeast is the richest known food source of the vitamins B and G. These tablets strengthen the digestive and intestinal organs, give tone and vigor to your nervous system. With the true causes of your trouble corrected, you enjoy new health and new beauty. Eruptions and blemishes vanish. Your complexion becomes clear and glowing. Your skin is the envy of men and women everywhere.

You can get Yeast Foam Tablets at any druggist's. The ten-day bottle costs 50c—only a few cents a day. Get a bottle now. Then watch the improvement in the way you look and feel!
